Few rail ones will be built this year. There is a general suspension of this work all over the country.

I am connected with a dozen of the corporations, and in each instance we have wound up the work for the present, after settling with different contractors. I do not think they will go on again for a year or two perhaps it will even be longer. I am ready to go on when I am satisfied that it will pay, but I am altogether opposed to building a mile or so of read when business will not justify it. There is an unerring law of progress that fully one half of the new ra broads are swept way and another set of proprietors comes in to take their places.
