Last night Professor Stewart delivered a public lecture at Ogden. Tonight he speaks before the graduates of the Utah public schools. On Wednesday afternoon he will address the graduates of Sugar district.

At the general assembly on Wednesday Elbert Thomas was elected president.

Among the number of teachers of this city who will be in attendance at the Chicago University summer school, the name of Adelbert Parrett appears.

David L. McDonald, of the Union will spend his summer in the Yellowstone.

Concluding the program, the members of the graduating class, through Mehring Bartley, presented the school this city, made a very valuable contribution to our library. His gift consists of a copy of Dr. Zimmerman's scholarly and exhaustive "History of Germany" in four large volumes, very substantially bound, and profusely illustrated. It is a work which will prove of great value to students of European history. The students hereby thank Bro. Richards for his generous gift.

Mr. J. W. Walsh, president of last year's students' society, and author of the popular college song "The Gold and the Blue," has returned from Arizona, where he was employed as a teacher in the Thatcher academy. He has entered school and obtained his diploma with the graduating class of 1903. His work at the A. C. U. as well as here was mainly along scientific lines, accordingly he will be graduated from the scientific course.

Prof. John T. Miller has just completed a very thorough psychological thesis, entitled "Phrenology, the True Science of Mind, and the Scientific Basis of Education." This is his thesis for graduation in the American university, Harriman, in which he has pursued a course of studies leading to the degree of Doctor of Science.

During the pleasant weather of the latter part of April, and May, Prof. Watson's classes in geology and physiography have made various trips into the neighboring foothills and mountains, for the purpose of studying the stratification and other geological features. Prof. Porter's class in botany have frequently secured the benches in search of botanical specimens.

Elaborate preparations are being made for commencement week. The exercises will include a field day at Saltair, a class day for the graduates who are preparing an excellent program, the regular commencement exercises including the baccalaureate sermon, and a class day for the third year students, the class of 1904.

WEBER STAKE ACADEMY.

Ogden.—The class in pedagogy has finished the course and are now reviewing by chapters. Next week each student will read papers upon topics embracing different parts of the subject.

Nearly all the classes have finished the course and have spent the time profitably in reviews. Next week the final "exams" will be given.

On Wednesday afternoon the High school team met the W. S. A. team on the diamond to play their last league game. The game was an interesting one until the last half of the sixth inning, when a decision of the umpire was objected to by the High school team, which immediately left the grounds, and the game went to our boys by the score of 5 to 4. When the trouble arose, the score stood 5 to 2.

Next year a course in domestic arts will be given by the academy. Mrs. Sarah T. Evans, who comes very highly recommended, will have charge of this department. This step is one in the right direction, and will materially increase the prestige of our school, as well as affording our girls an excellent opportunity to better themselves along this line. We hope the next "teaching" will be the establishment of a department of manual training for the male students.

The class of 1903 is hard at work on its exercises, that it will render Tuesday, June 2, at the academy.

Prof. Wm. M. Stewart gave a very interesting and instructive lecture at the academy Friday evening on the subject "The Moral Values of a Practical Education." The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon. In all probability this lecture closes the course of lectures, that have proved so successful.

The geology class will gather and classify geological specimens next week. The entire week will be spent in field work.

Wednesday afternoon the botany class left the academy and took a walk up to the spring in Taylor's canyon, and gathered several different specimens of flowers. The class went on another excursion this morning to Waterfall canyon.

Last Friday the county teachers' examination was held at the academy building. Principal McKay kindly tendered the use of three rooms of the academy for this purpose. Many of the teachers remained for Prof. Stewart's lecture in the evening.

Mrs. Terry, wife of Prof. Terry, went to Logan this week to attend a reunion of the Nebeker family.

The wife of Prof. Bradford is visiting relatives at Salt Lake, and will remain during the summer where she will be joined by her husband after commencement; Prof. Bradford will attend the University summer school.

B. Y. ACADEMY.

Provo. President Cluff went south Monday night to be present at the commencement exercises of the Beaver branch.

The contract for printing the annual has been awarded to the New Century Printing company of this city. It is to be a still further improvement on home circulars, both as to paper and workmanship.

President Lemon of Payson visited the school and spoke to the students in devotional exercises last Monday. He was here especially to look after the domestic organization of the Nebo school.

Elaborate preparations are being made by Mrs. Dusenberry and her kindergarten girls for a social reunion of the parents and kindergarten classes next Saturday night in the gymnasium hall. Many invitations have been issued.

Assistant Prof. Baldwin, who has conducted classes in physics, will begin a four years' course in Stanford next year. He expects to specialize in physics and engineering.

"A Double Victory" by Tom Higgs of the English H class was awarded first prize in the White and Blue story contest for the commencement number. Miss Amanda Thompson of the English D class, took the second prize with a story entitled "His Temptation."

Mr. Horace Scribner of the 1903 class, who entered Chicago university last year, when he will pursue studies in history and economics. Dilworth Woolley of the 1902s, will attend the law school at Ann Arbor, Mich.

The school is all agog over the opera which Prof. Land's music classes are putting on the boards two nights, Thursday and Friday of this week. The expenses have already gone up into the hundreds of dollars, but the people of Provo may safely be relied upon to join with the school in wiping off the obligations.

The Mandolin and Guitar club was announced to repeat its recent concert in the Fourth ward meetinghouse, the proceeds to go toward making up that ward's quota for the new academy building. "No admission fee will be charged," said Bishop Partridge, "giving out the notice, and no donation will be refused."

The Book of Mormon convention next Saturday and Sunday promises to be one of great interest to all who attend. There are six large classes studying this divine record in the academy. These would make an inspiring audience in themselves; but there seems likely to be a large attendance from the outside as well, especially as half rates have been secured on the railroads.

Examinations are in full progress. Prof. Nelson had promised his three classes in grammar a surprise. It came on Wednesday, when he declared the work of the course done. "But don't go round telling the rest of the students you got out of examinations. Say, rather, that every day's exercise during the semester has been an examination, and that the results are all recorded here," indicating his roll book. The students heaved a sigh of relief, then gave the professor a round of applause.

Among the departments of the academy which show surprising growth during the last year or two, is that presided over by Prof. Albert Miller, instructor in brass and wind instruments. Prof. Miller's classes are as follows: A beginners' brass band with ten members; a second beginners' brass band with five members; a well trained orchestra of 10 members, a well trained brass band of 19 members. The two last ter organizations need no mention—they are in evidence wherever the students go in a body. Besides these classes, Prof. Miller has 21 private students, 15 on the violin, and six on other instruments.

President Cluff's lecture last Sunday night on "Book of Mormon Lands" proved a pleasant surprise. In the first place, the pictures were well-selected and unusually clear. In the next place the running comment by the speaker was simple, direct, conversational, and strongly charged with the human element, which is the secret of interest both in descriptive and narrative work. The stories and anecdotes never failed to create suspense and reach a climax of kindly, contagious humor. The large audience, a third of which were children, who might have been expected to be restless, was held

SOLUTION OF THE PUZZLE OF THE WHITE ELEPHANT.

With the picture in its natural position a giraffe can be found near the lower right corner, between the hammock and tree from which it is hung, and a vulture in the upper part toward the left. By using the right side of the picture as base an alligator can be found in the extreme upper right corner, and the head of an ostrich on the right side, formed between the trunks of the large tree in the background. From the upper right corner as base a tiger is found near the center, formed in the elephant's leg. By using the upper part of the picture as base a Monkey can be found in the upper left corner and a Tatou in the upper part just to the left of middle. A mouse and tamandua are also found from this point, both of them being in the lower right part, formed in the foliage. With the left side used as base, a polar bear is formed in the elephant's ear, a lion in the extreme lower right corner and an Aard Vark toward the right, just below the elephant's fan.

THE EAGLE-EYED OSTRICH.

Find the Ostrich's twelve election officers.

Once upon a time there was an ostrich of such remarkable keen vision that he came to be called Eagle-eyed. His wonderful power of penetration were the talk of the whole jungle, and many were the tests that he was put to for the edification of his friends. He was always a welcome addition to any little hunting parties gotten up, for, owing to his remarkable power, it was impossible for an enemy of any kind to get within reach of them. He could see a hunter or any other adversary a mile off, and thus he was ever able to apprise his friends of the approach of danger. Day by day he became more popular, and in due course of time all the inhabitants of the jungle became entirely dependent on him for their safety, and looked up to him as their leader. He possessed other qualities which were apparent to none but his father. He knew that his son's remarkable vision was due not so much to his keen eyesight as to his keen foresight, and he therefore came to the conclusion that he need give himself no concern about his son's future welfare, for he was without doubt a born politician, and would make his mark in the world. He made it a point to be particularly affable with those who came to him for favors, and when he did others a good turn it was with such good grace that they always went away feeling that he considered it a great privilege to help them, and thus he gradually became firmly entrenched in the affection of the jungle folks. Now, like all who attain greatness he had some enemies, those who were envious of his success and brilliant prospects for the future. So there arose one among them who was determined to strip the ostrich of his power and appropriate it for himself. With great subtlety he worked on the feelings of the community with tales of corruption and crookedness, and soon had a considerable following among the susceptible goody-goody. After he had worked these up to a fever pitch and he thought the time had come for the overthrow of the ostrich, there went up a great cry of "Turn the rascals out!" so forth, and it seemed for awhile as if the eagle-eyed ostrich would be swept away in an avalanche of reform. When the fray was over, however, and the smoke of battle had cleared away, it was found that the eagle-eyed ostrich had not been asleep. So, with great address the reformers arrayed themselves in sackcloth and ashes and went away back and sat down.

The moral of this fable is: "You can fool some of the people all the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people for keeps."

Perils of Change of Life

The critical period called change of life is one of the most important in a woman's existence and fortunate indeed to the woman who has passed through it safely. I started this change of life in delicate health, when the vital functions were rather inactive, and soon learned to my sorrow that I had reached a turning point in my existence. These dreadful hot flashes and the blood surging to the head until it seemed ready to burst, and the faint dizzy feeling that follows, sometimes with chills and again with fever, will never be forgotten by the woman who has passed through the experience. I spent most of my time in bed, and when I was up and around was unable to do any work. Wine of Cardui helped me when neither medicine nor doctors were able to do me any good, and what a help and blessing it proved to be after using it a month I felt the weak and nervous trembling feeling used to experience pass away. My gradually health and strength were restored, I hardly dared believe that I was on the road to recovery, but soon found that I was gaining health and strength every day. I used your medicine off and on for over a year, until I had safely passed the period and am today in perfect health, thanks to Wine of Cardui.

Mrs. Amy Kirk
President South Side Woman's League.

WINE of CARDUI

If you live to your forty-third year you can't escape the approach of the "change of life", but with Wine of Cardui you can secure such health that the change will be devoid of danger.

The change of life benefits a healthy woman, but if you are allowing menstrual irregularities to go on unchecked or if you allow bearing-down pains to torture you month after month without securing the relief Wine of Cardui will bring, you are laying up misery and disaster for your declining years.

Why don't you go to your druggist to-day and secure a $1.00 bottle of Wine of Cardui and take it in the privacy of your home? It is the best medicine made for every trying crisis in a woman's life. It relieves every female disorder.
