'Mormons.'

A Ban Francisco Chronicle scribe has discovered a large mare's nest, big enough to furnish hlm with a subject for a tremendously long "solid" article with illustrations and sensational head-lines of startling significance. It is the Deseret Alphabet, which he has been led to believe is the "invention of a new language" concocted "so secretly that few knew or know that the at tempt was made." The supposed object of this "secret" production thus set forth in the Chronicle:

In 1868, if not earlier, the Regents of the Descret University ordered that all the school books should be printed in the new and strange characters referred to. Above al the use of primers printed in this new character was insisted upon, native land to the United States. and it was plain that this order was The leading principles in regard to part of a deep-seated intention to rear up a generation of Mormons who should not only have a litera- joy the society, join in the labors ture of their own, but who should and reap the reward which comes be unable to understand that of any from unity of action, with their coother people. Fortunately for the bibliophites, about ten copies were saved from destruction, one of which fell into the hands of M. M. Kaighn, a law-yer of Salt Lake City, and was by him presented to H. H. Bancroft, of San Francisco, who holds it as one of the treasures of his library.

This is all delightfully funny, but there is a great deal more of it, with a specimen passage from the suppose 1 cipher book, a long paragraph "solving the cipher,"and many comments on "the Mormon language,"In an attempt to make these characters a reproduction of the engraving, on the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated.

For the benefit of persons who may have been deceived by this rigmarolle-which is quite likely to In fact, for all public good, the be copied into other papers, we will explain:

Some years ago the subject of phonetic spelling was agitated in Utah, as it was in many parts of the United States, and a method of spelling by sound was thought to be a great aid to children in mastering the elements of the English language. Many persons thought that all words should be spelled phoneti-income.
