As a general rule it is better for all people to marry only those of their own faith. So-called "Liberals" hoot at this, particularly when best minds of this and other ages have come to a similar co. clusion.

There are special reasons why the Latter-day Saints should observe this rule. Many of them are under sacred covenants with the Almighty in reference to marital connections. All are within the purview of the Divine injunction to Israel, repeated, in substance, in this age to the people of God: "Neither shalt thou In olden times the predicthey may serve other gods, so will us to serve the people, and not to oppress them. We should be humble and meek avoiding even the apagainst you and destroy thee sud- pearance of evil, manifesting our denly." The Almighty declared to love for the Lord by our goodness to ancient Israel, if they in ermarried His Saints. While it was not prowith the Gentiles, "They shall be per that the Priesthood should be snares and traps unto you, and under them, they should not desscourges in your sides, and thorns in pise good suggestions from the your eyes, until ye perish off this humblest source.
