home of the attruent and is practised by many sons of parents whose example and precept are of the best. Many cases were cited of large firms and corporations throughout the coun-try who absolutely refuge to employ anyone addicted to the use of chartets, and the home were admontished that if anyone addicted to the use of characters, and the boys were admonished that if they would secure positions of honor and emoulment in life, they must ab-stain from the use of those things that stain from the use of those things that unfit them for the higher and nobler stations. It has become the fashion just as naturally as women adopt the prevailing styles. It becomes necessary to agitate the evils of using tobacco until it shall be considered unpopular by the majority, and then the battle will be speedily won. Dr. Brown strong-ly advocated the formation of anti-ci-garette clubs in the schools and churches, and cited cases where much good had been accomplished among such associations.
