Bald County Can Have Roads Worse Than a Bed Wed.

ARRAIGNMENT FOR MURDER.

Several Criminal Offenses Charged against Various Persons—One Person.

This was a busy day in the Third District court, with trials being in session under Judges Merritt and Battie. Battie took the decision in the Haining case, Judge Merritt rendered an important ruling with respect to a property dispute in the suit of Marion Whetstone vs. Geo. W. Green et al. This is the case where Private Justice Brown and his three relatives of Davis county, with Mr. Green, had jurisdiction of district 17, are made parties defendant in a suit for damages by Mr. Whetstone, for running a schoolroom and through his property when according to him the school room was entitled to only one road. Judge Merritt took the position that as he had no highway on the route, the property had been established as a road, which was not an unreasonable assumption for that purpose. The court held that the property was entitled to the road, and the officials did right in taking it in the manner they did. Upon this issue the court adjourned the trial until the next day, to try certain motions before it, and to present the case to the agent upon.

A Beautiful Dead.

The grand model which goes to the leader of the whistler band in the Extended concert is an exhibition in Leyton's window. It is a superb specimen of beauty and worth the best of a prima. The director who will wear it after the concert and the manager of the theater have agreed that the band will be the proudest of its members to be the possessor of this immortal region. Mr. Leyton's generosity in constituting this five-hundred-dollar beauty and in raising the price from $200 to $300, is a mark of the regard of all who are connected with the Extended and all who delight in the advance of the art.

This afternoon articles of reincorporation of the Z. C. M. I. were filed with the county clerk. The duration of the existence is now fifty years and the millions under which the institution will be conducted at the same time have been increased.

The incorporation, while it is a matter of course and is not unexpected, is an important business matter. The institution is the most prominent of the largest mercantile organizations in the state, and the business units of the Territory are more largely associated.
