LONDON, 27.—Vigorous measures are being taken for the effectual suppression of the Transvaal rebellion. The mail steamers, of the Cape of Good Hope lines, are being fitted as transports. The first reinforcement will sail early in December.

A Bucharest dispatch says: Prince Charles, of Roumania, has issued a proclamation formally annexing the Dobruja and proclaiming liberty and equality for the Mohammedans and Christians.

A Bombay dispatch says: It is reported that the Ameer, upon hearing of the fall of Fort Ali Mujid, released his son Yakoub Khan. A Lahore dispatch says: It is believed that Gen. Browne will profit by the panic of the Afghans to seize Khurd Cabul Pass.

Captain Pritchard, of the bark Noel Eilian, is very reticent, and refuses to show his log. He says he was going down the channel at five knots an hour. He was on the deck of the Noel Eilian, had been sounding the fog horn all night, until the steamer's light was visible. The collision occurred before those on board the Noel Eilian were aware. The blow was a glancing one, the bark bounded off, and he did not again see the steamer. Captain Pritchard thought he was sinking. The Noel Eilian was too much disabled to render assistance. Seven feet of her bow was carried away. Her lights were burning brightly at the time. She was sailing free on the starboard tack. The Pommerania ran across her bows and came on to her port bow, turning her around completely, and then went away at full speed. He was not aware that the Pommerania had sunk until he arrived at Folkstone.

The various accounts of the survivors concur in praising Captain Schwenzen and his officers, but represent that the crew only added to the confusion by a determination to save themselves. Captain Schwenzen, to quell the excitement, told the passengers the vessel was aground.

Roderick Schneider, a passenger, states that the captain, replying to repeated entreaties to get into one of the boats, asked them to stand alongside, when the mate shouted "We have waited long enough." The captain told them to pull away a little and wait. Just then the vessel sank. As she went down, Captain Schwenzen threw up his arms and exclaimed "Oh, God!" While the boat was rowing about we saw many people in the water with life preservers wrongly put on, so that the lower part of the body was floating, while the head was under water.

The conduct of the second boat-swain, on board the steamer, in endeavoring to save the ladies, was admirable, the carpenter stood by with a hatchet threatening to kill anybody who attempted to rush into the boats.

Mary Clymer says she was in the same boat with her sister Rose. They were both awakened by a crash and rushed on deck, half dressed, to where the boats were being put off. They were there joined by their brother, who assisted her (Mary) into the boat. A sailor threw Rose in, but she fell into the water, and had to be dragged out. Young Clymer, who remained on the steamer, seeing the boat full, and the sailors trying to get on board, thus endangering the lives of all, cut the ropes and set her adrift, saying "Goodbye" to his saved relatives. He thought his mother and other relatives were in the boat, but the sailors had prevented them from getting in. It is a noticeable fact that 103 sailors out of 111 are saved.

Louise Rassmann, of Philadelphia, a steerage passenger, who escaped, says: Captain Schwenzen's last words, when the boat was obliged to row away to avoid being sucked down, were, in German, "Farewell, children." There were a good many passengers around the captain, crying for help and clinging to him and to each other.

Henry Schmidt, a steerage passenger, says the plug was missing from the boat first lowered, which prevented her from being righted when she capsized. Six persons were drowned from that boat. A rowlock was missing from the second boat, which prevented her going to the assistance of the strugglers.

One of the Pommerania's crew says he saw the bark's lights ten minutes before she struck, but the collision did not seem probable until three minutes before it occurred. As Noel Eilian was going free, she might have avoided striking. The Pommerania went to port as far as she could, but the collision was then unavoidable.

The first officer Franzen, says it was his watch. He was in charge of the ship. Captain Schwenzen was on deck, but not on the bridge. Franzen declines to say whether the whistle was blowing.

A telegram has been received from Maaslin, Holland, announcing that the steamer City of Amsterdam had arrived there with the Captain of the Pommerania on board.

Ann Wessel, New York, Louise Rassmann, Philadelphia, Amalie Newmann, New York, and Sophie Boltzman, remained at the Sailor's Home, in Dover, last night. All the survivors left for London or the continent, this morning, with the exception of three children, who are supposed to have been orphaned by the disaster. One child, Martha Miller, aged four years, says she is the daughter of a sea captain, now at Buenos Ayres. The child adds that her mother, sister Dora, and her brother Allie were on board the Pommerania.

Two children, girls, age respectively three years and nine months, remain in Dover not identified.

A telegram from Maaslin, in reply to an inquiry for information of Captain Schwenzen, says he left immediately for Rotterdam.

A dispatch from Lahore states that General Roberts has reached Fort Mahomed Azim, near Kurrum Fort, without opposition.

PARIS, 27.—The American residents, last night, gave a banquet in honor of Governor Richard C. McCormick.

The Trieste town council has been dissolved by imperial order, in consequence, it is understood, of the majority coquetting with the Italian party.

BERLIN, 27.—The United States legation has requested the American consul at Cologne to make further inquiries concerning the citizen of Wisconsin, who was arrested under the socialist law, and inform the legation of the result.

On the Emperor's return, the authorities intend to declare Berlin in a state of siege, under the provisions of the socialist law.

PESTH, 27.—Last night, while Tiesz, the Hungarian prime minister, was entertaining Count Andrassy and members of the delegation, a bomb exploded in an alley between the Fortress Theatre and the minister's palace. Examination of the fragments showed the bomb had been charged with dynamite. The windows of the palace were shattered but nobody was hurt. There is no clue to the perpetrators of the outrage. The excitement is great.

Yet He Kept His Word.

They had been engaged about fifteen minutes, and she nestled her head a little closer under the shadow of his monumental shirt collar, and whispered: "And now, what are you going to call me, Algernon?" "Birdie!" he whispered, rapturously, while his voice trembled with tender emotion, "always and ever, nothing but Birdie!" And she fairly cooed with delight. He kept his word, although with the growing precision of middle age, he has become specific and does not deal in sweeping generalities any more; and so it was that day before yesterday, a neighbor going in the back way to borrow the ax, a cup of sugar and the cistern pole, heard him call her an old "sage hen."—Burlington Hawkrye.

CATARRH

THE EYE, EAR AND THROAT

Successfully Treated with

SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE.

SUCCESS is the test of merit, and success in the treatment of Catarrhal Affections, after so many miserable failures, means undoubted specific curative properties in the remedy used. Does SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE for Catarrh possess such properties? The evidence, in the shape of unsolicited testimonials from the most respectable people in all stations of life, must be conclusive on this point. Never, we believe, in the history of popular medicines has such valuable testimony been offered, freely offered, in favor of any remedy than that in the possession of the proprietors of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE. And valuable as it does not represent a thousandth part of the recommendations which are to-day offered by friends to friends in its favor. People of wealth and refinement in all parts of the country daily admit its superiority over any method of cure known to the regular medical profession, but shun the publicity incidental to a published statement. Hence the testimonials in our possession represent but a small part of following unsolicited testimonials from HENRY WELLS, Esq., of Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express, is an outspoken endorsement of which we are justly proud.

INVALUABLE.

Messrs. WEEKS & POTTER, Wholesale Druggists, Boston, Mass.: Gentlemen,—I have for some months felt it a duty that I owe to suffering humanity to write you, stating the great benefit that I have derived from the use of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE for Catarrh. For more than twenty years I have been afflicted with this very troublesome complaint. I have tried all the remedies that I could find, but without material or permanent benefit. Last fall the disease had arrived at that state that I must have resorted to surgery. The entire membranous system had become so inflamed, and the stomach so disordered, that it was a doubtful matter whether I could go to the Pacific coast, or if I did go whether I should live to come back or not. I saw an advertisement of this medicine, and although being very incredulous about specifics or nostrums of any kind, yet in sheer desperation I tried this, and was at once benefited by it. The changes of climate, a chronic disease of the liver, and my age—over 70—may prevent my entire restoration, but the benefit I derive from its daily use is to me invaluable, and I am hoping to be completely cured, and at last arrive at a respectable old age.

If this statement of my case can be of any service to those afflicted as I have been, and enable you to bring this remedy into more general use, especially in the Pacific coast (where it is much needed), my object in writing this note will be obtained.

Very truly yours, HENRY WELLS, AUCTIONEER, N. Y. June, 1876. of Wells, Fargo & Co.
