

LOCAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

Kimball and William Hyde addressed the congregation. Company D, N. G. U., of which body the deceased was a member, attended in a body, and he was buried with full military honors. Col. A special from Logan to the Tribune under date of Oct. 1st says:

Samuel Hendrick, 16 years old, accidentally shot himself in the calf of the leg this morning, about three miles this side of Mendon, with a shotgun, while hunting ducks, with two companions. One ran to Logan for help, the other remained in Hendrick's company.

Help was sent as soon as the messenger arrived, and Hendricks was taken home in a buggy. His leg remained unbound, and loss of blood caused death just before he reached home. The inquest was before Justice E. W. Smith, C. O. Goodwin and P. A. Nelson, jurors; Dr. Snow, examining surgeon.

REXBURG, Idaho, Oct. 2, 1896.

Walter Payne, coroner for Fremont county, received word yesterday from Thomas Gooch of Marysville that they had discovered on Boon creek the remains of a man, badly decomposed, the body dismembered and partly eaten by wild animals. There were found near the body a wallet, a snow shoe, and parts, or pieces of a pair of overalls.

It is supposed the man met his death last winter while snowshoeing his way over the divide. Where he hid from is not at present known, as no one is missing from that section of the country. It is, however, utterly impossible for any one to recognize the remains, but the few articles found might be a clue to his identity. Parties having friends missing would do well to correspond with Thomas Gooch, justice of the peace, Marysville, Fremont county, Idaho. IN LACQ.

A most lamentable railroad accident occurred Thursday afternoon, between 4 and 5 o'clock, in the northwestern part of the city. Through it little Wilhelm, the nine-year-old son of Nils P. Anderson, at 538 north Third West street, lost his life by jumping in front of and being run over by a Great Salt Lake & Hot Springs railway.

The unfortunate lad, with other children, was playing about a Rapid Transit car near Third West and Fifth North. He was standing on the rear platform as the car was started on the return trip into the city. He made an effort to get off as quickly as possible and jumped off and ran directly in front of the incoming Salt Lake and Hot Springs train, the result being that he was knocked down and run over. His body was badly bruised, his right leg mangled and his head cut. He was carried home and Drs. Critchlow and Cantwell summoned to his assistance, but his injuries were of too serious a character to permit of recovery and he died at 9:50 o'clock.

It will be with deep sorrow that many people in this community will learn of the death, which occurred at 9 a. m. today, October 5th, of little Margaret Jennings Carlisle, the 7-year-old daughter of John E. and the late Emma Jennings Carlisle. The cause of death was dysentery. Little Margaret was born October 7, 1889, and her mother, who was the daughter of the late William Jennings and his wife Priscilla, of this city, died at that time. The babe was given every care, being placed in charge of its grandmother, who, with its father, bestowed the most loving attention upon it. It grew to be a sweet and most interesting child. A week ago it was attacked with dysentery. Brother Carlisle, whose present home is in Logan, came to this city, and the most careful and skilled attendance was furnished the little one, but to no avail, and death called her home.

Samuel Hendricks, within a few days of sixteen years of age, accidentally shot himself on Thursday morning, as before stated in the News, while out hunting about half way between Logan and Mendon, in company with two brothers named Worley, of about the same age. The two Worley boys were some distance away when the accident occurred, and were summoned to the scene by young Hendrick's outcries. They found that he was wounded in the leg, between the knee and ankle. The calf of the leg was nearly torn away, and the limb, including the bone, was badly mangled. Hendricks told his companions that he had shot and wounded a duck, and that just as he was entering the water to capture it, evidently pulling his gun toward him by the muzzle, one barrel was discharged, with the disastrous result stated above. The wound bled freely and one of the boys proposed to improvise a tourniquet from a handkerchief; but young Hendricks not realizing that his life was at stake, objected, as it caused him additional pain. One of the Worley boys hurried to Logan to secure aid, and the other remained with the wounded boy. A buggy was procured and he was taken home; but the necessary delay proved fatal, and just before reaching home he died, having bled to death. An inquest was held at which the above facts were developed and a verdict rendered in accordance therewith. The funeral services, held Sunday, had a large attendance. The family have the sympathy of the entire community. The boy's father died very suddenly last all of heart disease, one death has occurred in the family since, and one of the ladies of the family was thrown from a carriage while on the way to the funeral, dislocating a shoulder and breaking a collar bone.

A telephone message from Ogden at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon was to the effect that Miss Ott, the young lady who was in all probability mortally wounded by a persevering and unwelcome suitor was unconscious; that she rallied only occasionally and that she had, according to the report of attending surgeons, not more than one chance in twenty to recover. The bullets which entered her body were located by the surgeons this morning but were not removed on account of the critical condition of the patient.

McCabe is rapidly recovering from the wounds his assailant hoped would prove fatal. Edson is still in the city jail under guard. Popular feeling against him is very strong while sympathy for his victims is expressed on every hand.

The shooting was the result of an ungoverned jealous passion. The young girl is well and favorably known in Ogden. She received two bullets. Her suitor is shot through the arm, and the reckless being that did the shooting occupies a murderer's cell in the city jail. The young lady is Miss Lillie Ott, daughter of Mr. J. M. Ott of the Hughes Produce company. The wounded man is W. L. McCabe, an extra brakeman on the Southern Pacific, and the would-be assassin is W. S. Edson, a persistent admirer of the young lady with whom she had refused to have anything to do.

Edson waylaid Miss Ott and McCabe between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth street on Washington avenue while the young couple were going toward the young lady's home early in the evening. Edson was inflamed with all the pangs of jealousy, and from his post behind an electric light pole he awaited the approach of the girl he loved and his hated rival. One story goes that he stepped out from his ambush and asked the young lady to accept his company on the following evening. She politely refused and Edson opened fire with a revolver. Another story is to the effect that Edson began shooting without saying a word. Three shots were fired at the young lady, one ball striking her just right of the center of the breast, another piercing the groin and lodging near the pelvic cavity. The third bullet went wide of its mark. When the young lady fell the assassin turned his murderous weapon on McCabe, who received one bullet in the arm and another grazed his back.

At that point a street car was passing and at the sound of the shots, the conductor, Ed Bailey, stopped the car and hastened to the scene of the tragedy. He assisted the young lady on the car, then he captured the murderous Edson and took the entire party to the center of town. Miss Ott and McCabe were quickly taken to the Broom hotel and a doctor summoned, while Edson was turned over to the police.
