Salad of Lima Beans—Soak a cupful of lima beans over night, boil until tender, slip off the skin as you would from blanched almonds, drain and set aside to get cold; mix with an equal quantity of cold boiled potatoes, thinly sliced and then quartered, and to one pint of the mixture add two tablespoonsful of diced celery and one green onion also diced. Serve on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise. When boiling lima beans to serve as a vegetable or for soup a few can be set aside.

Hatpins are always changing. The prettiest and newest things in that line are huge round gold balls. It is quite the proper caper to have all of one's hatpins to match instead of the motley collection that is usually seen.

Lace veils may be dipped in gasoline and then pressed with an iron until fairly warm. They will come out nicely. Face veils bought by the yard may be cleaned with alcohol, the fabric being pulled gently into straight lines while it is drying. The alcohol gives the proper body and stiffness to the veil.

Prune Gems—Soak one-half pound prunes overnight, stone and cut in quarter-inch pieces. Separate two eggs, beat yolks and add to them one-half teaspoonful salt, one and one-half tablespoonsful of butter melted and one-half cup of sugar. Beat well, add three-fourths cup of milk and one and one-half cups of flour. Beat until smooth, add the prunes and three-fourths teaspoonful of grated nutmeg. Add the beaten white of the eggs and one teaspoonful baking powder. Fold in lightly. Bake in greased pan pans 30 minutes in a moderately brisk oven. Serve hot.

Rainy days often mean trouble in the household where there are plenty of children, and some one has suggested that the mother of such a brood would do well to provide herself with a rainy-day closet.

To it will find their way special playthings, ready-made for state occasions, picture scrap books, paste pots, scissors, old magazines and paint boxes. Anything, in fact, that can provide indoor amusement. When the rainy day comes round the closet may be opened and a distribution of its blessings made.

Children delight in novelty, and the very fact that there is a special treat reserved for the days when the sun doesn't shine will go a long way toward alleviating any disappointment over the putting off of out-of-door games and pleasures.

In Women's World.

The heavy traveling dress for summer is no longer a convention that must be deferred to, writes Mrs. Osborn, the authority on fashions, in the May Delinctor. The fashionables have been pleased to discard it. The unfashionables may well follow it.

This year the woman traveler, if sensible, will fall in line with the fashion and be seen no more in cumbersome traveling gowns. She will wear thin dresses.

The love of comfort and cleanliness are not alone responsible for the sweeping change that is taking place in this feature of woman's dress. Many of us live in the country nowadays. Women dress in pink or blue or white as they choose, put on an attractive coat of silk or lace, and come up to town ready gowned for whatever they may wish to do.

So today it grows more and more the custom not to dress especially for traveling, but to dress appropriately, as befits the place for which one is bound. As a result, we have an increasing number of attractive summer wraps, garments that may be thrown on over pretty pinks and blues and pale mauve tints, foulards, cotton stuffs, pongees and linens and muslins.

Although these now necessary wraps are of every kind and description—whites and champagne shades perhaps predominating—the one with which we are likely to become most familiar is a glorified edition of what we once knew as the linen "duster."

It is true that only women of large means can afford the more perishable costumes, but I am ready to make a radical-sounding statement that isn't radical at all. It is economy to wear thin traveling gowns! It is easier to be immaculate in light clothes than in heavy! Witness the wash tub!

The less expensive materials—chambrays, linens, sephyr gingham, mohair, sicilians, samurai, pongee—may be made up into costumes suitable for the train.

In taking long journeys, it is, of course, necessary to prepare for possible changes of the weather. But how sensible to do this by carrying a change of wrap, light or heavy? I advocate light traveling costumes even for extensive trips. Laundry can be taught to keep up with one by express.

As for those who travel frequently from suburb to city, making a daily trip of it, there is no question as to the economy and cleanliness of the new fashion.

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, April 29.—Miss Ellen Thomas, who has been a resident of this city the past three years, takes her departure for her home in Ogden Monday, April 29. On Thursday evening last, at midnight headquarters, she was given a farewell soiree by Prest. and Mrs. McQuarrie to which all the members of the Utah colony were invited. The invitations being general, a big turnout was the result, for Miss Thomas' friends are legion here. She came here to study voice culture and has made great progress in music, the concert stage being the goal for which she has fitted herself during her years of study, but her labors have not been confined to the dining art alone—cheerfully has she assisted in the Sunday school, Mutual and Sunday services, being organist for all three. No matter how urgent her duties have been, her duty to her church has always come first—and she has well earned the title of the "Little Missionary."

Miss Thomas leaves the Utah contingent here with the best of wishes for her future success. All who know her will watch with interest her progress. She will stay a day in Niagara and a few days in Chicago—on her way west.

During the week of May 6, Miss Leigh will be seen at Keith's, on Fourteenth street, her route on the circuit bringing the sketch—"Kid Olive Nail," to this theater. She will be assisted by the author, Edward Elmer, who plays the opposite male part. Miss Leigh has been playing at all the outside houses in Keith's circuit, during the winter and the sketch has proved a success wherever seen. That she will repeat her success in the city, there is small doubt.

Mr. Ashby Snow, the Salt Lake attorney, who has been at the Park Ave. hotel during last week, leaves today for the west.

On Wednesday, Mrs. McQuarrie and her mother, Mrs. Daniel Seegmiller, with Elder H. E. Hatch, will go to Washington for a few days to meet Prest. McQuarrie, who has been holding conferences for the last few weeks in the south. Mrs. McQuarrie goes for rest from her long confinement at home during the winter in the care of her little daughter Alice, who was so severely burned last November, and who is now only able to be left in the care of friends. It will be Mrs. Seegmiller's first visit to the capital since her arrival in September of last year. Elder Hatch will visit Washington with Prest. McQuarrie, also Philadelphia and Albany, before sailing for Europe where he will finish his mission.

Thursday morning Miss Emma Lucy Gates returned from her trip to North Carolina and Washington, D. C., while in the latter city she was the guest of Miss Barratt, daughter of Kate Waller Barratt, president of the Florence Critchenden mission. Miss Gates has greatly benefited by the change and is busy now preparing to sail on May 7 for Berlin.

Artist Fairbanks, of Salt Lake, who was once a well known figure here, is with us again and will do some extensive copying from some famous friends. Mr. and Mrs. Sears have been so long identified with the Utah colony that their absence will be keenly felt. They will return in the autumn. Mr. Sears having an amount of work to do that calls him back. The rest and change will benefit both and their friends wish them good luck on their summer trip.

Channing Pollock and his wife sailed yesterday for Europe on special business connected with Collier's Weekly, expecting to be absent three or four months. Mr. Pollock says his European letters will appear in the "News."

Mrs. Roche and her daughter, Mr. Pollock's mother, are at Lakewood for a few weeks. Mrs. Pollock has been ill and the change was advised by her physician.
