Dispatches J. H. Steyer's family has arrived in Ogden from Chadron, Neb., to make their future home here.

Morris Hardman, proprietor of the Chadron store, returned home from an extended pleasure trip to New York, Boston and other eastern cities.

Mr. J. H. Moore, of Toledo, Ohio, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ogden Railway Conductors, was in Ogden Thursday, the day of the local lodge. During the day she attended the session of the order and addressed the ladies. She was given a reception and dinner at the Ogden hotel. The session was attended by most of the members of the order and was a very enjoyable time was had by all present. Mrs. Moore left yesterday for her home.

Miss Annie B. Brown, deputy county clerk, returned home this week from a two weeks' pleasure in Salt Lake City.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Hubbard and James Lamb, of Alameda, California, are visiting in Ogden. They expect to remain in Ogden about six weeks.

Mr. Joseph McManis and daughter, of Portland, Idaho, are visiting with relatives in Ogden this week.

Sept. 7. J. S. Noble and wife left for Ogden Thursday where Mrs. Noble has been for the benefit of her health. She has been poor of late.

Mr. E. M. Allison, Jr., returned this week from an extended eastern trip.

City Councilman Charles Cross returned Monday from an extended business trip to Chicago.

Tonight Glenwood park closes for the season after a very pleasant and successful season. The management of the park deserves great credit for the many attractions which they have furnished for the entertainment of the public who have so frequented the park during the beautiful summer months.

Misses Alice, Nellie and Agnes McGuire returned home Sunday from an extended visit in Montana.

CLUB CHAT.

The summer home conducted by the Women's Christian association of Philadelphia is one of the most flourishing in the country. It is at Asbury Park, N. J., and is called "Sea Rest," appropriately. It was founded twenty-seven years ago at a time when the railroad did not go within six miles of the sea. It is now a small frame house, accommodating twenty-one young women; to-day it covers nearly a block and can hold six hundred. The requisites for admission are that the applicant shall be a Protestant dependent upon her own exertions for support, and can furnish a satisfactory reference. The terms for board are $3.25 a week for each occupant of a double room, and $4.00 for a single room. Applications are so numerous that two weeks is the limit of stay; even then it is not possible to accommodate all that wish to avail themselves of this opportunity. The life is very simple and there are few restrictions. The wide piazzas are provided with comfortable chairs, where a walk from a well-appointed library can be enjoyed, and bathing, of course, is a part of each day's round. Many teachers are to be found there through the year. This is but one of the many valuable efforts carried on by the Philadelphia association for the benefit and betterment of business women and girls and those fitting themselves for self-support.

Plans for the ninth annual meeting of the Bluebell Economic association, to be held in Buffalo, N. Y., on Sept. 18 and 19, are rapidly taking shape. The program has not been entirely arranged, but there will be short addresses, and the sessions on the various subjects pertaining to the home and its management, the educational advantages of manual training, and the necessity of training women's clubs in the various branches of the association. Among the speakers are Professor Atwater of the United States Agricultural department, Melville Dewey, of Albany, N. Y., James L. H. H. of New York, and Mrs. Platt-Decker and Mrs. Whitmore of Denver, Mrs. Pugh and Mrs. MacFarland of Nebraska, Mrs. Kimberley of New York, Mrs. W. W. of New York, Mrs. Adair of New York, and Mrs. Adair of New York. The program is a most interesting and valuable one, and it is hoped that Mrs. H. H. of Chicago, and Mr. Mary Green, former president of the association, will be present to respond. There is much interest manifested in the work of this association, and Mrs. Larned, of Syracuse, the president, is receiving invitations from many states to address women's clubs through the west as well as the east. Mrs. Larned will address the Ohio State Federation in Columbus, and has promised addresses almost weekly till April, when she will speak in Colorado and Nebraska. The association aims to bring out the best of the literature and assistance for its members. It has now a number of standing committees whose chairman are Mrs. Larned, of Syracuse, Mrs. James L. Hughes, of Toledo, and Mrs. James L. Hughes, of Toledo. Discussion concerning the most important event of the club year—the fifth biennial meeting of the General Federation—will increase from now on. The next meeting will be held in St. Louis on April 25 next, at Los Angeles, Cal. California club women naturally feel their responsibility, and have been at work since the last meeting last February for the executive board of their invitation to receive the Federation; but the interest elsewhere has been lessening. The program is strong, made up of Mrs. H. H. of Kansas, chairman, Mrs. West of Massachusetts, Mrs. Denison of New York, and Mrs. Wiles, of Illinois. The work is very large, and only in the rough. In the hands of such trained club officers and frequent biennial attendants, it is safe to assume that the association's experience will be successfully applied to the Los Angeles meeting. Presidential addresses are being spoken of, though only tentatively. The name of Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, president of the California State confederation, is mentioned in connection with the office. Mrs. Burdette was present at the Milwaukee meeting and came into some prominence there, though she has never been identified with the affairs of the general society. She is at present traveling in Europe. California activity for the Los Angeles meeting being under the direction of Mrs. Lovell White, Federation vice-president, and president of the big California club of San Francisco, and of Mrs. W. W. Silson, of Los Angeles. There are four federated clubs in Los Angeles, the membership of all amounting to about a thousand women. This is more, by a hundred or two, than were included in the number of federated clubs in Milwaukee at the time of the biennial meeting there. Los Angeles is accustomed to maintaining large bodies, and the young but enthusiastic State Federation, with its 600 members, is practicing typically united, to a woman, in the effort to make the club-women's visit to California a brilliant success.

FEMINE FLOTSAM.

Life in Gay Paris.

In other ways Paris is amusing itself after its own fashion. The latest thing I have heard of is a Quo Vadis ball, where every one personated some character from Quo Vadis. Another amusing affair is a "Review" in which every one is dressed to represent a Lalique jewel. "Astarte" has been given at the opera, and is pronounced there some beyond anything which has been brought out yet at the Grand Opera. It does not even go with being pronounced by the critics as a masterpiece. We went to the Deschamps wedding, and stood by the door just as the bride was trying to make her difficult way through the pushing, seething crowd of her husband's electric car. No doubt, for it was safe to suppose that at least half of the five thousand people who crowded about the old church of St. Germain des Pres (no one was admitted there without an invitation) were the supporters of the president of the chamber of deputies. I admired the charming, half-grown sort of fashion with which the young girl, Mlle. Germaine Brice, supported the ordeal. She smiled good-naturedly, even laughed early on or twice in short, looked like a mistress quite to the manner born for the delightful old palace over which she will soon preside.—Katharine de Forest, in Harper's Bazar.

Yellow Shades for Windows.

There is nothing like soft yellow in a window. It always suggests sunlight even on the gloomiest day. A celestial

$6,000,000 TO HELP HER ENTERTAIN.

Six million dollars will be paid to Princess Hatfield by the widow of the late railroad magnate, Collis P. Huntington, in settlement of the former's claim upon the estate of the millionaire. The princess was Huntington's adopted daughter. She is residing near London and it is whispered will use the money to improve her position in society.

brated with making a tour of a lady's apartment and coming upon a bathroom in which there was a window with yellow panes, said: "I see you bathe in sunshine!" In dark bed rooms, therefore, or in those opening on shafts, or in windows only a few feet away from an opposite wall yellow is strongly urged. When this cannot be done with drapery, or when windows with faded panes of yellow glass are not possible, resort may be had to varnish mixed with a little raw sienna or the Venetian pink which gives a yellow. I know one window coming against a house some twelve feet away, which when so treated gave perfect privacy to the occupant of the room, besides adding an agreeable light. Even at night the window was opaque.—Harper's Bazar.

Golf Gloves.

Golf gloves are hard to find—that is, just what one would wish. The heavy kid, with the holes in the back and in the palm to give ventilation, protect the hands very satisfactorily, as do also the gloves of wash leather. But there are some gloves made for golf of for driving that are of a silk mesh, looking like the crocheted or netted work on the purses. These have kid palms, with holes for ventilation. They are cool, wash well, and the kid on the palms protects the hands very satisfactorily. They are expensive and hard to find, but are exceedingly smart for any one who wishes to carry out her fancy of wearing all white. Nothing looks better, for with a plique shirt the ordinary white kid glove of either place or suede seems out of place, whereas these gloves look what they were designed to look—useful, and made for a certain purpose. The plain white chambray wash leather serve the purpose when these special golf gloves are not to be found.

A Lucky Baby.

The young son of the Duchess of Marlborough (nee Vanderbilt) is indeed a lucky baby as worldly matters go. Here are his titles and a summary of his prospective fortunes: He is Marquis of Blandford, and will be upon the death of his father: Duke of Marlborough, Earl of Marlborough, Baron of Sundelund, Baron of Sundelund, Prince of the Holy Roman Empire, Prince of Munderheim in Suabia. Equal in importance to the name is the wealth that he will inherit. What this will amount to can be only roughly computed. Even its possessor cannot estimate it with exactness, so vast is the figure. At the least calculation it will amount to $25,000,000; other estimates have placed it at double the figure.

force. The siege lasted four months, marked on both sides by extraordinary skill, patience and valor. But the efforts of the Turks were unavailing, and they finally withdrew, with but ten thousand men left out of the original forty thousand, while of the nine thousand under Villetta hardly a hundred were capable of bearing arms. Though well nigh crushed out of existence, the knights of Malta have proved themselves the heroes of Christendom. In order to thoroughly appreciate modern Malta, it seems necessary to recall something of its earlier history; hence this article, which I hope you will pardon.

PREVENT A BLOCKADE.

It was a lucky day for England when the treaty of Paris gave Malta peacefully into her hands. The island forms not only an admirable station for a fleet to command the Mediterranean, but also a useful and important focus where a force protecting the route to Egypt and India can be concentrated, but also a useful and important focus where a force protecting the route to Egypt and India can be concentrated, but also a useful and important focus where a force protecting the route to Egypt and India can be concentrated.

One is astonished at the magnificence of Valletta, with its splendid public buildings, fine educational institutions and works of art, out of all proportion to the size of the island. The city is a masterpiece of architecture, and its position is so strategic that it is almost impossible to imagine it being taken by force. of the top of the promontory, from harbor to harbor. Opposite the Porta Reale is a small bay, and the town is the drawbridge, over a ditch a thousand yards long, sixty feet deep and thirty wide, which cuts off communication between the harbor and the sea. The historic gate of the Knights, Porta San Giorgio, has been mostly displaced by distressingly fresh stones and mortar. Its original Latin inscription remains, recording the foundation of the city, and also two quaint statues, of Grand Commanders L'Isle Adams and L'Isle Adams.

of the old arsenal of the Order of St. John. Not far below this is the ancient fortress of the Provencians, the handsome Union club. It is a fair specimen of those noble old inns, its banqueting room being ninety feet long, fifty feet wide and five feet high. You may see the up-to-date evidence of the Order of St. John, the knights who are exiled to this Mediterranean rock are not enduring any hardships. King Edward maintained a considerable force at Malta—a enormous one. Besides a large body of British artillery, the garrison includes the Royal Malta Fencible artillery and a fine native regiment of a thousand men. There is an extensive arsenal, and of course a very important dock-yard. Malta being the headquarters of the British fleet in the Mediterranean.

DIVORCE BECAUSE SHE STOLE CHICKENS.

MRS. CHARLES J. PRESTON.

One of the strangest cases ever brought before a Connecticut court will be the proceedings of Chas. J. Preston, a wealthy and socially prominent resident of Woodbury, Conn., against his wife for absolute divorce. The reason ascribed for the action is the fact that Mrs. Preston has been caught red-handed in the act of appropriating her neighbor's prize chickens. A search of her house disclosed the fact that her cellar was full of live poultry, the valuable property of her neighbors. The husband is so indignant at his wife's inexplicable act that he brings this suit. Mrs. Preston has disappeared from her home since the discovery. She was a society leader of Woodbury, rich and beautiful.

its ponderous name because the investigation of the members of the "Most Distinguished Order of S. S. Michael and George" used to be held here. The private apartments are handsomely furnished, and the kitchen is a masterpiece of the earlier history of the Order of St. John, paved with beautiful tiles and filled with rare majolica, old paintings and splendid furniture. Most interesting of all is the armory, an immense hall, crowded with trophies and specimens of ancient arms, among which are ranged at intervals the majolica vases once used in the pharmacy of the knights. You may see the rusty and ancient sword of Charlemagne, and the identical sword he wore when second in command of the Turkish army during the unsuccessful siege of Malta, in 1565; the armor of the knight who led the retreat of the knights from Rhodes; the bull of Paschal II, founder of the Order of St. John; the original grant of Malta to the knights by Charles V., and many other things which make you wonder whether you are really living in the Twentieth century, or if Father Time has rolled back his scroll a few hundred years.

WALKER'S STORE.

First Information About New Things For Fall.

NEWEST DRESS GOODS. Counters, tables and shelves are heaped to overflowing yet all the new things are not in, and many of those already here have not been marked. Come along, though, we gladly show them, because, no doubt, you are anxious to see the new, rich colorings and beautifully soft texture cloths Dame Fashion has pronounced as fall favorites. Plain weaves have lost none of their popularity, but pattern suitings and a few other fabrics show a decided difference that you will like.

LATEST FOOTWEAR. For man or woman patent vulcanized shoes are and will be the decided fashion this fall and winter through. The shoe shows it in many different last styles now, but all the lines are not quite in place yet. Other kinds in the higher grade shoes are here, and a particular word must be given the French heel extension sole shoes—entirely new, never known until this season, but a shoe that has been longingly looked for by women. Then there are some exceptionally fine shoes in newest lasts made for men, $3.50 and $4.00. A visit to the shoe department is worth while.

NEWS OF THE DORIS. Information has reached us to the effect that it will be here not later than the 15th. You know "The Doris" is being made for us, hence the delay—it will not occur again, they be before every man for the price. $3.50
