The week has been a gay one in social circles, chief among those events which have contributed to its liviiness are the affairs given in honor of the visiting officers and their ladies at the Fort. On Monday a reception was held for the officers in the afternoon at the house of Col. Lockwood, on Tuesday Mrs. Morrow entertained at a tea for Mrs. Baldwin and Mrs. Drum; on Wednesday Mrs. Lockwood gave an afternoon cardparty, and in the evening occurred the hop, which was made specially elaborate in their honor,

Military emblems and the national colors predominated in the decorations at the post hop. Flags were everywhere and paims and flowers added to the attractive appearance. The receiv-ing party numbered the members of the visiting party, Col. and Mrs. Lockwood, Captain and Mrs. E. M. Blake, Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Moody. Music was rendered by the regimental band, and the event was in every way delightful,

Mrs. Frank Morrow was hostess at a delightful tea on Tuesday given in hon-or of Mrs. Baldwin and Mrs. Drum, The rooms were bright with holiday red and green-Christmas bells, red candles and shades and red carnations being artistically arranged with festoons of green. The hostess was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Lockwood, Mrs. J. E. Woodward, Mrs. Sturgiss, Mrs. Jamerson, Miss Lillian Woodward and Miss Katherine Judge.

Mrs. W. S. McCornick entertained the bridge club at her home on Wednesday.

The Sewing club met with Miss Abble Wells on Wednesday.

On Tuesday Mrs. F. S. Castleton was the honored guest at a reception and family reunion given in celebration of her birthday by her seven sons. The reception was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Castleton, which was made bright with flowers and greens for the occasion, chiefly the gifts of friends, a large number of whom called. In the evening the members of the family folned in a pleasant reunion at the same place.

About 70 guests were present to enjoy the luncheon given by Mrs. J. E. Dooly at her home on Wednesday, The rooms were decorated in red, white and green with the holiday colors pre-dominating, the small tables at which the guests were seated having each a crystal candlestick with red candle surrounded with a wreath of holly, while red carnations were on the side board, and red shaded candelabra on the mantel.
