Dr. FOOTE, Senior,

Of 120 Lexington Avenue, New York,

Hereby cautions the public NOT to Employ or Communicate With a man styling himself "Dr. Foot, Jr." without making due inquiry.

This man came to Salt Lake City representing himself as the son of Dr. E. B. FOOTE of New York, the well known specialist, as abundantly proved by affidavits. As rumored he came into Salt Lake City from Dakota and Montana from an exposé made there, he changed his base and represented himself as the son of a more noted specialist in New York City than Dr. E. B. FOOTE, the well known author. Mr. JOHN F. TROW, of the well known Trow's Directory, in New York City (forty years in the directory business), Ex-Governor FRANK FULLER, of Utah, and the Hon. ABRAM WAKEMAN, for many years Postmaster in New York City, also Surveyor of the Port, have their affidavits that there are no other doctors in New York by the name of FOOTE or FOOTE, excepting Dr. E. B. FOOTE, the the author of "Medical Common Sense," etc., and h s two sons, Dr. E. B. FOOTE, JR., and Dr. HERBERT T. FOOTE. The genuine Dr. FOOTE, Jr., will hereafter always employ the initials, E. B., in designating his name. Heretofore he has been known not only at home but wherever his publications have been circulated, by the name of Dr. FOOTE, Jr. Greater care will be taken hereafter, in view of the fact that an unprincipled person has assumed to profit by his and his father's reputation.

Those desiring further and more detailed information in respect to this matter, will receive it by addressing Box 414, Salt Lake City Utah.

Persons having information of advantage to plaintiffs will kindly communicate the same to J. W. Ivey; with Sutherland & McBride, Salt Lake City.

Those desiring to consult Dr. FOOTE professionally or to order remedies should address either

Dr. E. B. FOOTE, Sr., or Dr. E. B. FOOTE, Jr.,

Within the last week it has been impossible to get more than from 25 to 50-keg lots from the Wheeling district.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

The meeting in the Tabernacle yesterday afternoon was presided over by Elder Wm. Eddington. It opened by the choir singing the hymn commencing:

Awake ye Saints of God, awake!
Call on the Lord in mighty prayer.

Prayer was offered by Elder William Willes, after which the choir sang:

He died! the great Redeemer died,
And Israel's daughters wept around.

The Bishopric of the 15th Ward officiated in asking the blessing upon and dispensing the Sacrament.

Elder Parley P. Pratt, being called upon to address the congregation remarked that he had recently filled a brief mission in the Utah Penitentiary, a kind of Mission which, though not pleasant, was perhaps as important as any other. President A. M. Cannon, who had been his fellow prisoner, and who is still confined in the Penitentiary, had said that one faithful Elder in that place is worth a dozen missionaries outside. The speaker could say that he had gone to prison for his religious convictions. The brethren who were confined there were in good spirits and had not complained at what they were called to endure for the sake of their religion, although it was not pleasant by any means. They were reminded almost every hour that they were prisoners, for the same spirit which prevailed in the courts when they were tried and convicted—a disposition to humiliate and heap ignominy upon them—had been manifested in a greater or less degree by those who had charge of the Penitentiary since their incarceration. Rules more binding and discipline more rigid had been adopted during the past six months than formerly, with the evident intention of subjecting the brethren to greater hardship. His faith had not decreased, but had rather been strengthened in the divinity of the work with which he was connected. He claimed to know for himself that it was the work of the great Elohelm. It was the privilege of every person to have this testimony. It was this which the Savior promised when He said: "If any man will do the will of my Father he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God or whether I speak of myself." The Lord reveals His will and gives testimonies to the faithful by degrees—line upon line. Testified that God had spoken to man in this age and revealed His will to Joseph Smith, and that He is doing so to John Taylor. The angel which John foresaw flying through the midst of heaven having the everlasting gospel to preach to the people dwelling upon the earth, came to Joseph Smith, and a Gospel dispensation was again committed unto man. Faithful Elders who have received that Gospel go from land to land to proclaim it unto others, and it is being preached in all the world for a witness before the end shall come. Thousands have received it and are rejoicing, and tens of thousands who are yet in darkness will, when the chains of superstition and error that bind the minds and hearts of men are broken, yet receive it and aid the Saints in building up Zion. Every prophecy will be fulfilled; Zion will be built up, and those who oppose it will be cast down.

Elder James C. Watson, on arising to speak, remarked that as returned missionaries were generally expected to report their labors while absent, he supposed he would be required to conform to the rule. He had been filling a mission in the penitentiary, in company with Brother Pratt, which, though brief—extending over a period of only five months and four days—had not been devoid of interest as well as trial. When friends visited him he had to ask permission to speak to them and anyone acquainted with his disposition could fancy what a trial that was to him. He had been treated while in the penitentiary better than he had expected to be. He never had received an unpleasant word from anyone connected with the institution. True, the rules of the prison are more strict than formerly and the other prisoners say it is in consequence of the "Mormons" being confined there, but he could not vouch for the truth of the statement. There were many good-hearted men imprisoned there who would not, if liberated disgrace society. Indulgence in strong drink had in most instances led them to the commission of overt acts. The speaker exhorted his hearers to abstain from such indulgence, and save themselves from such consequences. He never had been on a preaching mission, but while incarcerated in the penitentiary had frequently taken occasion to advocate the principles of the Gospel and counsel reformation of life among those with whom his lot had been cast. Some of them had formerly been numbered with the Saints, but had fallen into transgression. He hoped, however, their imprisonment would remind them of the necessity of retracing their steps and seeking by obedience to the Gospel to gain the divine favor. If his imprisonment would serve to cancel some of the debts against him for remissness, he would never regret it. He was not ashamed of having been an inmate of that place, in view of having gone there for the sake of principle. He knew the work with which he was identified to be of God, and hoped to be true to it under all circumstances. He had found the Penitentiary the hardest place in which to pray he had ever been in, and he was inclined to feel bad and reproach himself until he learned from President A. M. Cannon that his feelings were similar. He did not like the place well enough to run headlong to get into it, but he would do nothing dishonorable to keep out. He could speak well for the brethren who had been his companions. He had never heard them murmur. Brother Musser had been quite sick at one time, but had kept up his spirits well. Brother Pratt had also been so poorly for awhile that serious results were feared, but the brethren had administered to him and their prayers had been heard and answered.

Elder H. W. Naisbitt, being called upon to occupy the remainder of the time, said, if there was one thing more than another calculated to inspire a man with love for his associates, it was to know of their fortitude in the hour of trial, and learn that in the greatest privations they had never lost sight of the testimony of Jesus. All the trials and uncertainties of life were not circumscribed by the walls of the Penitentiary. It had been said that every person who would attain to salvation would be called upon to endure trials. Tribulation was a grand thing in the development of Christian character. When a man through obedience to the Gospel is made equal to the circumstances around him it is a proof that the Gospel is not of human invention, for that which is human cannot rise higher than its source. Everything seeks for and finds its level. Our city water works and flouring mills illustrate this. If the source of the stream was not higher than the orifice from which it flowed there would be no flowing wells. It is the power behind religion that leads man to assimilate himself to the source from which it springs. Religion, like most other things, is subject to counterfeit; there is true and false religion. Religion as it exists has been mixed and diluted by the theories of men. It has been used as the organ by which kings and priests have placed their heels upon the necks of teeming millions of the human family. We all know how it is in regard to current coin. There is coin that is genuine and others that are spurious, and a man might as well conclude to deny himself all the advantages of good coin because there are base coins in existence as for him to say there is no true religion because superstition, priestcraft and perverted religions prevail in the world. If a counterfeit coin should be presented in business circles it would be tested. Though it might have the appearance of the genuine, its false ring would betray it. There are systems which, upon their face show evidence of fraud. They are "out of color," as the miner would say; but there are others that greatly resemble the genuine, and the nearer the approach to the correct pattern the more likely they are to deceive. If a coin should be presented that contained valuable metal; if in point of intrinsic value it fell but little short of the genuine and yet was coined without the proper authority, it would still be spurious, and the parties issuing or circulating it would be subject to penalty. A church might be established that possessed many of the characteristics of the true Church, but if not organized by authority it would be powerless in the purchasing of eternal life. No matter how closely churches may resemble the genuine, the fact of their not having been issued by the true source awards to them the character of counterfeit currency. The Savior alluded to the spurious religions that should arise when He said, if it were possible they would deceive the very elect. The same as it would take an expert to detect true from base coin, so it would require a man endowed with the spirit of discernment and inspiration to detect the false doctrines that men might invent. Some men had received the first principles of the Gospel, gathered with the Saints, etc., yet apparently possess but little of the spirit of the Gospel. These first ordinances are but the preliminaries, the foundation stones, upon which to build the purchasing power which will prepare a man for exaltation. From time immemorial the Saints have been told, "Live your religion," until the counsel has become crystallized in the teachings of the Church. That may mean a great deal or comparatively nothing. There are different degrees of development among members of the Church. Some are always active and their fruits indicate that their religion has taken deep root; others are the reverse, and when they pass away the best that can be said of them is: "He never did any harm." Their life is of a negative character, while that of a man who is filled with the spirit of the Gospel is of a positive character.

The speaker referred to the various definitions of true religion, or the means of salvation, given in the scriptures, proving by numerous quotations the comprehensiveness of the same, and dwelling especially upon the love for one another and charity required. One of the Apostles had asked if we loved not our brethren whom we had seen, how we could love God whom we had not seen, and the speaker said, Show me a man whose life has been full of selfishness, who has sought to build himself up on the ruins of others, and I will show you one who is a long way from the kingdom of God. Now that some of our brethren are in prison for the practice of their religion, how many are there who congratulate themselves that they are not liable to suffer such penalties? How many think that now is the time to take care of self, and like the snail which carries its house upon its back, and occasionally shuts itself out from view, withdraw themselves from others, shut their eyes to the wants of the needy, and stifle every feeling of sympathy in their hearts? There are cases of sickness, of business failures, of loss by sudden disasters and other misfortunes that call for sympathy, which should not find expression merely in words. The Englishman took a proper view of the kind of sympathy required in such cases when he said to a friend of one whom misfortune had overtaken, "I feel for him to the amount of one sovereign; how sorry do you feel?" A disposition to deny one's self for the benefit of others is practical religion. It follows the first principles of the Gospel naturally, is the kernel of the nut, and no person without it will ever attain to greatness in the kingdom of God.

The choir sang an anthem, with solo by Matthew Noall, and Elder Arthur Stayner pronounced the benediction.
