In Oconomowoc it culminated on Saturday night, and buckwheat and sorghum suffered accordingly. Black frost put in its appearance on the lowlands, and corn in such places will not make more than a few weeks more needed to mature corn.

Appleton dispatches say corn is ruined there. It was planted late and is nowhere near maturity. Wheat and barley are doing well.

At Marshall, corn will yield nothing.

Waltham, Mass., 10.—The last six or eight weeks have been the driest in our history for years. On many farms vegetation is so far gone that it cannot be revived by frequent copious rains, but with any beneficial result.

Cattle are suffering through the Cape district because of poor pastures.
