

PROGRESSION INEVITABLE.

Progress is seen in everything. Every hour new changes bring. No matter where we turn our eyes. New forms and new conditions rise. Some things better, some things worse. And some appear not quite so well. While some may grow in strength and health.

The Evidence of Christianity.

But, first, this does not account for its acceptance by those who had no such ardent hopes. And these were the immense majority. The entire body of Christ's disciples does not appear to have numbered above five hundred. How, then, the acceptance of the resurrection by the great body of the Christians, who had already extended to almost every quarter of the globe, known world before that generation had passed away?
