TOURISTS SCARED BY FAKE STORIES.

An Object Lesson in What is Being Done by Special Dispatch Fiends.

SOME AWFUL "MORMON" TALES.

Lady So Frightened that She Dare Not Enter the Temple Block With Her Husband.

As an object lesson in what is being accomplished by the vilifiers and defamers of Utah and her people, the special dispatch fiends and authors of weird and terrible "Mormon" stories that are printed for outside consumption a few hours spent on and around the Temple block during the tourist season leads the average resident of Salt Lake to wonder and exclaim with Puck, "What fools these mortals be."

To the man who has resided for any length of time in Utah and takes a pride in the fair name of his state, some of the questions asked in all good faith by the strangers move him strangely—to merriment, pity or exasperation, according to his temperament.

The spectacle of eastern ladies who are really and truly afraid to enter the Tabernacle, owing to having read libelous stories in public prints is an edifying one. Such cases have been encountered this summer and this month; they are directly traceable to men who obtain their bread and butter in this city by their guile, and they are called anything but live, up-to-date newspaper men.

Not the least among the guilty in spreading these stories of Utah and her people, are the backbiters who lead their patrons up with terrible tales, according to their gullibility, as they drive them around the city and show the points of interest. The backbiters get all kinds of "fun" out of their tales, and the exasperated hearers leave the state they have had in improving on "facts" among those they meet in their home town on their return.

SOME 20TH CENTURY IDEAS.

To be convinced that the bureau of information established in the Temple block to conduct tourists through the church buildings, and to give them an honest impression of their purpose, is performing useful work in disabusing the minds of misinformed people of false impressions of "Mormonism," one has merely to mingle for a little while in the throngs of incoming and outgoing tourists. Here is a remark of a New York girl overheard as she was leaving the Tabernacle a few days ago:

"I notice they did not show us the place where Brigham Young imprisoned his wives and had them beheaded when he grew tired of them. I wonder if that little building over there isn't the place." And she pointed to the old adobe structure covering the mercantile store in the northeast corner of the grounds.

"That's the place, and we don't want to go in there," she said, "because it is so horrible. I have heard that a man who had just announced himself as a recent graduate of the University of New York. 'I have been much interested in your doctrine of blood atonement, which I have heard is a great deal. Tell me, is it true that building over there where you formerly offered your human sacrifices?' He pointed to the smokestack of the Temple boiler house.

"Yes," answered the astonished guide, "that's the place, and we don't want to go in there," she said, "because it is so horrible. I have heard that a man who had just announced himself as a recent graduate of the University of New York. 'I have been much interested in your doctrine of blood atonement, which I have heard is a great deal. Tell me, is it true that building over there where you formerly offered your human sacrifices?' He pointed to the smokestack of the Temple boiler house.

UNIQUE DISCOVERY.

"Where is that West Side farm where the Bishops keep their wives, since they were stopped from keeping them in Salt Lake City?" came in all seriousness from an elderly woman to a guide, as they were standing in the door of the bureau.

"Why I have heard of such a place, and I've lived here all my life," was the reply.

"O but there is such a place. Why right in this city I was told there was, on my way up from the depot. And the children born there to its mostyly ideal, and so easily trained to believe in the horrible practices of 'Mormonism'." The guide wisely decided that discussion of the question was hopeless.

What goes on inside the Temple is a favorite subject for the average tourist, and one who is not a member of the church is not likely to know if it was the runs of the church were kept shut up from human sight, another wanted to be shown the room where each of the windows was dedicated to a single wife by Brigham Young.

"So that Brigham Young's monument, is it?" remarked a man from Kentucky on sizing up the massive spires of the Temple. "And he's buried there in the corner stone of that huge affair."

"Well no, not exactly; he's buried up on First street, in the family cemetery." "O, get out, you can't fool me. He was buried there once, but I know a man who saw him dug up and reburied in the corner stone of the Temple, so he would be buried there from robbers."

One lady asked recently if the Temple was where the Latter-day Saints buried their dead, and asserted, on being corrected, that she had heard positively that the building was used as a sepulchre for the "sacred" "Mormon" leaders, and for that purpose only.

NEW SCRIP STORY.

Tithing scrip interests not a few, and comments of wise ones their traveling companions as to its uses are somewhat ludicrous. One man recently displayed a sample of the scrip to his party with this explanation of it: "This scrip is what determines a man's standing in the Mormon Church. Every Mormon has to buy from his Bishop, whatever amount he is ordered to, and if he doesn't buy all he's told to he is put out of the way, and no questions asked. The standing of each man in the Church depends on what he buys."

McClellan an Italian. Prof. McClellan would smile if he knew of the following remark that was overheard at an organ recital. "Poor fool. Do you know the Mormons brought that young man clear from Italy to play their organ for them, and they were so delighted when they first heard him that they presented him with four wives to keep him here."

That the "Mormons" are a tribe of some sort, indigenous to the west, and troublesome to the nation in just such a way as he looked at the howling hares and held them up and then by tourists from remote places. One such saw the small model of Dallin's "Signal of Peace," which stands on the table in the center of the bureau's reception room, as he looked at the howling hares and held them up and then by tourists from remote places. lived to run loose, and are quite like ordinary fiends in appearance.

TOD GOODWIN, MARTYR.

People who allow years of hateful thought to explode upon the portals of the "Mormon" places of worship, appear now and then. One lady, who was wandering alone through the grounds was asked if she desired a guide to show her through the buildings. "No," she snapped back; "I don't need any of your old Mormon help. Your infamous Joseph Smith deserted his wife when he was young, and then Brigham Young practiced that infamous deed of capturing hundreds of young girls and giving your Elders their choice for their harems. Judge Goodwin, who dared to cry out against you when you were powerful, paid the penalty, for you killed his son. Don't you think you can make a Mormon out of me. I don't want any of your old literature, or any of your help."

LADY SIEZED WITH FRIGHT.

Fright of everything connected with the grounds and the guides sometimes seized visitors. During the rush of the Tourist season, a lady who entered the bureau and reported that there was a lady of his party out to the grounds that he couldn't get to come near the building. He asked to have a woman guide go out and see if she would induce her to come in. When approached the woman refused to go anywhere, and began to tell of the horrible things she had heard of "Mormonism." Finally, however, she was willing to confess that she might be taken, and to accompany a party to the buildings. The organ captivated her completely, and when she went away she took copies of everything on hand in the shape of printed information about the Church.

And so the incidents run, happening here and there among the thousands of more visitors, and the bureau is every day in the vacation season. Most of the questions indicate merely a harmless ignorance of conditions, and of the genius of the "Mormon" people. Some of them indicate the harmful effect of the work of enthusiastic people in Salt Lake who may even "imagine" they are sending the truth out, in their anxiety to say something bad about "Mormonism."
