SAVE YOUR HAIR | TO LEARN HOW TO DO IT READ AND HEED WHAT FOLLOWS.

SAVE YOUR HAIR.—The laws of Health and Longevity demand it, the customs of social life require it. The matter is of great importance in every way.

BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR.—It is the surpassing crown of glory, and for the loss of it there is no compensation.

CULTIVATE YOUR HAIR.—For by no other means can it be saved and beautified.

LYON'S

KATHAIRON,

Discovered thirty-five years ago by Prof. Lyon, of Yale, is the most perfect preparation in the world for preserving and beautifying the hair.

Besides being the best hair dressing ever produced, Lyon's Kathairon will positively prevent grayness, and will restore new hair to bald heads, if the roots and follicles are not destroyed.

It actually performs these seeming miracles, of which the following is

A FAIR SPECIMEN

I had been entirely bald for several years, constitutional, I suppose. I used a few bottles of Kathairon, and, to my great surprise, I have a thick growth of young hair.

COL. JOHN L. DORRANCE, U. S. A.

In every important respect the Kathairon is absolutely incomparable. It is unequaled.

1. To Cure Baldness.
2. To Restore Gray Hair.
3. To Remove Dandruff.
4. To Dress and Beautify the Hair.

BEAR IN MIND.—The Kathairon is no sticky paste of sulphur and sugar-of-lead, to paint and daub the hair and paralyze the brain. It is a pure and limpid vegetable lotion, intended to restore the hair by natural growth and reinvigoration. It is splendidly perfumed, and the most delightful toilet dressing known. No lady's or gentleman's toilet outfit is complete without Lyon's Kathairon.

EXTRA SESSION.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 17.—During the debate on the amendment on the subject of clerks in the Postoffice Department, a colloquy occurred between Saulsbury and Windom, in which the latter said he would not join the former in his wish to economize the expenses by reducing the army, which is required for the protection of the frontier from the attacks of Indians.

A discussion followed with Saulsbury, Conkling and Edmunds, using the name of General Schenck in the use of troops in Maryland and Delaware.

Logan said there was no more honorable man than General Schenck. When treason stalked about the land and the nation was rolling and rocking to and fro like a distressed vessel on a stormy sea, General Schenck reached forth his hand in the country's defense. He was one of a band of patriots who defied treason, and risked his life and all other things precious for the preservation of the Union. He did not claim that General Schenck was entitled to credit for being a government patriot, but because he was a patriot was no reason why he should be maligned here or elsewhere. General Schenck was a crippled man, a pensoner for wounds received in his country's defense, and he was a patriot and an honest man, notwithstanding the sneers of the Senator from Delaware. Adjourned.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 17. — Springer spoke in favor of his amendment to which Belford's amendment was offered. It would make a difference between the value of bullion and the value of coin inure to the government instead of to the bullion owner. It would put into the treasury the difference between bullion and the coin value of silver and keep it there as a trust fund for the people of the United States. [Applause on the republican side.]

Buckner opposed Springer's amendment as a proposition utterly destructive of the whole theory on which the bill was founded. It was a worse blow at silver than the proposition of the Secretary of the Treasury to stop its coinage at $50,000,000. This amendment cut the throat of the silver dollar, and if it was put upon the bill, he would vote against the bill because it would then put into the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury the very power he desired and would virtually stop the coinage of another silver dollar.

Newberry opposed the bill. It was not based upon facts, but upon the theories, opinions and guesses of the wildest kind. He was thinking of offering an amendment to the bill providing that any owner of paper pulp might deposit the same at the Treasury and receive legal tender notes of the same denomination as those now in use.

Bright said the question was whether the Government should have a seignorage coinage or whether the country should have free coinage, and argued when a seignorage was put upon coin it would be driven out of the mints. He opposed Springer's amendment as amounting to little less than a tax of 16 per cent. on the coinage of silver bullion.

Soon afterwards a vote was taken on Belford's amendment, and was defeated, yeas 87, nays 129.

Marsh argued against any change in the standard of value, and asserted that to-day the gold dollar really represented $1.15, and the standard silver dollar represented one dollar. The demonetization of silver had been a crime and fraud, and the third section of the bill was another fraud, because it was giving the bullion holder an advantage of seventeen per cent. [Laughter and applause on the republican side.]

Garfield said Congress had never legislated on any question that reached further both territorially and in time, and touched more vital interests than those touched by this and similar bills. Within recent years, and notably within recent months, the leading thinkers in the civilized world has become alarmed at the attitude of the precious metals in relation to each other, and they were already of the opinion that by some wise, broad and judicious arrangement, both metals might be kept in service for the currency of the world. Even England, which for more than half a century had believed in a single gold standard, was now seriously meditating how she might harness both these forces to the monetary power of the world, and yet outside of this chamber and Capitol there was not a single bimetallic authority in the world who regarded it safe to plunge out in any wider coinage of silver at the present time. France and the Latin Union, which had believed in bimetallism, and had maintained it against all comers, and had advocated it throughout the world, were not coining silver coin and had not done so since 1864. The most stringent advocates of bimetallism now said it would be ruinous to bimetallism for France or the Latin Union to coin any more silver, and yet the United States government which had coined in less than two years more of silver dollars than had been previously coined from the foundation of the government and ten times more than had been coined in seventy years of its existence, was to-day fearing the world and denying universal opinion about bimetallism by saying that America single handed could enter the contest and settle this mighty question alone. This was madness. He had once seen a dog on a great stack of hay which had been floated out into the wide overflowed bed of a river. For a little while the dog appeared perfectly happy, the hay stack was there, the stock pen was there, and he thought the world was all right, but bye and bye he began to discover that the barn and the house and surroundings were not all there as they had been before he went to sleep, and he began to understand that he could not quite command all the prospect as he had done. And so with the United States. We are all afloat on this mighty question, and we "bay the moon," as we float down the whirling tide, and say, "we are wise; we have been launched on a wide current which sweeps over the whole world, and we bark from our haystacks as if we commanded the whole. For Heaven's sake let us take some account of the flood. Let us understand that the deluge means something, and let us try if we can get our bearings before we undertake to fix it all up in the House of Representatives. To-day we are coining one-third of all the silver that is being coined in the round world. China is doing another third and all the nations of the globe are using the other third for subsidiary coin. If we want to go with China and part company with all the civilized nations of the world, let us do it in this bill. What this country needs the most of all is that this Congress go home, (laughter and applause on the republican side,) and let these forces of business and peace and order and brotherhood work in their natural way, and bring us into peace. Even now our administration is opening negotiations with all the western nations to see if there cannot be an international arrangement whereby this question of bi-metalism may be wisely settled.

Wasner said he was glad the present administration had been induced by the action of this House to open correspondence on this question with foreign countries, and he hoped that action would be backed up by a vote of the House. The opinion seemed to prevail very generally that if this bill passed, it at once transferred by law 15 per cent. of all the silver bullion that might be coined to the bullion holder. The absurdity of that proposition was to him so plain that he only wondered that so many had fallen into the fallacy, and had become bewildered on that point. Take for instance gold, it was set apart from all other things as a money metal and the coining of it did not allay its value. The same had been true of silver exactly up to 1873. An ounce of bullion had had precisely the same value in the market as an ounce of coin.

Haskell declared himself an enthusiastic bimetalist, but opposed the bill and Springer's amendment because if the bill passed, gold would leave the country, and currency would be contracted to the extent of $200,000,000.

Ewing said the great apparent object of the amendment of Springer was to save to the government the difference between coin and the bullion of silver, but the great defect of the amendment was that while repealing, as this bill would repeal, the existing law making peremptory the coinage of $2,000,000 a month, this amendment would commit to the Secretary of the Treasury the power, at his discretion, to stop entirely the coinage of the silver dollar. How? It is said the secretary should buy it at the market price. Where? At London, or San Francisco, or New York, or Virginia City. He had a right to fix where, and being utterly and intensely inimical to the coinage of silver dollars, he would so construe and exercise his powers that no bullion holder would sell at the market price as declared by him. The country would in that way be put off with coinage which he ventured to say would not amount to the present coinage required by law. The amendment which he proposed fixed a market value at the average market price at New York and San Francisco for the week preceding the time the bullion was deposited.

A vote was then taken on Ewing's amendment, and it was adopted—yeas 106, nays 105, the Speaker casting the deciding vote, amid applause on the democratic side.

Springer's amendment as amended by Ewing was rejected—yeas 38, nays 171.

The House then, on the motion of Clymer, adjourned until Tuesday.

Executive Session.

WASHINGTON, 17.—The Senate's executive session to-day was wholly devoted to an animated discussion of the report of the judiciary committee on the question of the right of the Senate to confirm nominations for army appointments and promotions above the rank of captain, in view of the act of June 18th, 1878, which prohibited such appointments and promotions till after the report of the committee, commonly known as the Burnside commission, shall be made and acted upon by Congress. The conclusion of the judiciary committee that this prohibitory clause is still in force was to-day supported in an argument by Garland, Maxey and Thurman, Randolph, Hoar, Butler, Logan and Burnside. A number of other senators participated briefly in the debate, but the foregoing were the principal speakers. The advocates of the judiciary committee's report argued that, although the various proceedings were taken in each house of the Forty-fifth Congress upon the report submitted by the Burnside commission, no act either in affirmance or disaffirmance thereof ever received the concurrence of both houses has yet been taken upon that report. It was also argued that it would be unwise for the Senate to confirm the pending nominations, because, in the event of a different construction being placed upon the law by the House of Representatives and courts, there would be trouble and confusion in readjusting the ranks of officers whose promotions might then prove to have been illegal. The result is considered doubtful, although the recommendations of the judiciary committee are equally sustained.

Fatal Shooting.

SEDALIA, Mo., 17.—A fatal shooting affray occurred seven miles north of this city, late yesterday, between Caleb Lowry and Bard Smith, young men, sons of prominent citizens in that vicinity. An old grudge existed between the parties, and they met on the road, Smith in a wagon, and Lowry on horseback. Smith jumped from the wagon, drew a pistol and fired five shots, one of which passed through Lowry's body, another through his leg, through the saddle and into the horse. Lowry returned but one shot, that missing Smith, who jumped into the wagon and drove off. Lowry is not expected to live through the night.

Bi-cycle Racing.

Carbolic Salve will cure cuts and bruises.

Henry's Carbolic Salve ranks at the head of all Salves, Ointments and other Healing Compounds, and has achieved a greater reputation and has a larger sale than any other similar preparation. The most VIRULENT ORDER AND ULCERS have been cured with wonderous rapidity by the use of Carbolic Salve, and it is prescribed now almost universally by Physicians throughout the country in their practice.

Testimonials from the most respectable sources, medical and otherwise, are constantly accumulating on our hands, demonstrating the sovereign efficacy of this Great External Remedy, and that the cures which it effects are as prompt as they are complete. The two following cases are all we deem it necessary to insert.

Geo. B. Lincoln, Pres't of the Board of Health, N. Y., writes: Your Carbolic Salve is an excellent article, and I thank you for. This is another evidence of the great value of the discovery of Carbolic acid."

D. H. Locke (Petroleum V. Nasby), of New York, states that he had "on the forefinger of his right hand one of those pleasant pets, a run-round; the luster became inflamed to a degree unbearable.

* * * A friend dressed it with Carbolic Salve, and in twenty minutes the pain had so much subsided as to give a fair night's rest. * * * *

Henry's Carbolic Salve

is used extensively in Hospitals, and is found to be not only a thorough purifier and disinfectant, but also the most wonderful and speedy healing remedy ever known. Sold by all Druggists.
