Pursuant to Section 11 of Chapter XL of the laws of the Territory of Utah, passed at the twenty-ninth session of the Legislative Assembly, the undersigned, the collector of the county of Salt Lake, Territory aforesaid, hereby gives notice of publication, that the above named Persons are delinquent in the payment of Territorial, school, county or special district school taxes, in said county for the year 1890, in the amount set opposite their respective names.

The same will be exposed for sale at the front door of the County Court House, in Salt Lake City, on the third Monday in December, 1890, at 12 o'clock noon, and the sale will be continued from day to day until the delinquent list is exhausted.

L. G. HARDY,
Collector Salt Lake County, Utah.

SUMMONS.

In the District Court in and for the Third Judicial District of Utah Territory, County of Salt Lake.

LESLIE PUTNAM, Plaintiff, vs.
MARK S. PUTNAM, Defendant. } SUMMONS.

The People of the Territory of Utah send Greeting:

To Mark S. Putnam, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED TO appear in an action brought against you by the above named plaintiff in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the Territory of Utah, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons—if served within this county, or, if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days; otherwise within forty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint.

The said action is brought to have a decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony existing between plaintiff and defendant, and for such other and further relief in the premises as may be just and equitable. Above relief prayed on the grounds that for more than three years last past defendant has failed to provide for plaintiff the common necessaries of life and has since contributed at all to her support during that time; and that plaintiff and defendant have not lived together as husband and wife for more than three years last past.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness the Hon. Charles S. Zane, Judge, and the Seal of the District Court of the Third Judicial District, in and for the Territory of Utah, this 1st day of November in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

DESERET EVENING NEWS.

Thursday, December 11, 1890.

SEWING-WOMEN'S WAGES.

WAGES PAID BY CLOTHING MANUFACTURERS IN LARGE CITIES.

"Yes, we have been cut down shamefully in the past four or five years, and I am not able to make a living alone now," said an old lady that lives in the fifth floor of a Third street tenement house, to a Cincinnati Times reporter the other morning. She has been making pants and vests for wholesale clothiers here for fifteen years, as she has been a widow a number of years, and by hard work, has succeeded in raising three daughters and two sons.

"You still work at the business?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, yes, for I get along better than I used to, as my girls are now big enough to help me, but if I had to do it alone, as I did when we were paid more, I would be swamped. No one of us could make a living now, but it costs no more to keep us now than formerly, and the four o' us make and manage to get along very well."

"What prices are you getting now?"

"Here are some pants," said the old lady with locks that have long since told the story of life's winter by their whiteness, handed the writer a pair of jeans pants of the cheapest quality, that I am making at $1 a dozen, or 8½ cents a piece."

"How many pairs of these can you make in a day by working ten hours?"

"Not more than three pairs to save my soul, and you could readily see that no family like mine could exist on 25 cents a day. But I wish to be fair with you. When I was young I expect I could make five or six pairs if I worked as fast as I could and do nothing else, but in those days I got $2.50 and $3 a dozen for the same work. Now, my three girls and myself, by denying them every privilege of going out and all of us living as slaves, we are able to make about $12 a week, as we turn out about 150 pairs, or twelve dozen every Saturday night."

"Are these the lowest prices you know of?"

"No, I know of a woman that is making about the same quality of work as this and is only getting 90 cents for a dozen pairs.

"Different firms may vary in prices?"

"Yes, they do. There is all the difference in the world in the firm one works for. Now, I know of some that will find fault with everything, and will put off paying their sewing women as long as possible. Why, I know of one firm that would not allow the women that worked for them to enter their store at the public entrance. Now, I just came out flat-footed and told him that if I wasn't good enough to walk in the same door other people did I wasn't good enough to sew on his pants."

"In which is there the most money—coats, pants or vests?"

"I can do better with pants. Vests would do very well if it was not for the button holes to make in them, I tell you. There is a good deal of work to make coats. How people can sew them for $1 a dozen I can't understand."

"Don't the manufacturers pay according to the amount of work?"

"No, they seem to pay according to the quality of the goods, but they require just as good and as much work on the cheap goods as on the more expensive."

"Then prices are getting lower all the time?"

"Yes, for work that we used to get 2, $2.25, $2.50 and $3 we now get from 90 cents to $1.25.

UNLUCKY THIRTEEN.

THE CONDUCTOR DID NOT UNDERSTAND, BUT HE WILL NEXT TIME.

It is a custom on some street railways to give annual passes, which are numbered, says the Seattle Press. These passes are not necessarily shown each time a man rides on the cars of that line, but each one bears a number, and when asked for his fare the holder of the pass calls the number of his pass.

Not long since the holder of pass No. 13 on one of the Seattle lines got on a car, accompanied by two ladies, for whom he must, of course, pay fare. It happened that the conductor was a new man and not acquainted with the pass system.

The conductor entered the car in quest of fares and the first man he approached was the holder of the pass.

The gentleman handed him one dollar to take the ladies' fare from, at the same time remarking distinctly "Thirteen."

The conductor took the dollar and then began ringing the bell of the register. "Ding, ding, ding, ding, ding, ding, ding, ding," went the bell.

"Here, here," broke in the passenger, "what in thunder are you trying to do?"

"Didn't you say that you wanted to pay for thirteen?"

"No, you double-breasted lunkhead! I hold pass No. 13 and want to pay for two ladies."

"Oh!" exclaimed the conductor mildly, "why didn't you say so before."

Then the bell-puller gave his passenger back his change and inwardly determined to get even on the first small boy that attempted to steal a ride.

Primus—Do you think that building a monument is the best way to keep General Grant's personality before the public?

Secundus—No; a surer way is not to build the monument and let a great city like Chicago keep worrying herself all the time.—Harper's Weekly.

RAPID REPORTING.

HOW THEY DO IT ACROSS THE WATER.

According to a Scottish contemporary this is the way one of Mr. Gladstone's great Midlothian speeches was reported so as to be in type almost before the cheers which greeted its conclusion had ceased. He began his speech at 4:06 p. m. and finished at 5:35; the last of the reporter's "copy" was in the printers' hands—at a distance of half a mile off—at 5:38; the forms of type were made up and sent to press at 5:50; twelve minutes were spent in not stereotyping room; the machines were set rolling at 6:02, and boys with bundles of papers were selling in all directions a minute or two afterwards, the completed report being published half an hour before any other. There were in all over six columns of a report, of which almost five columns were devoted to Mr. Gladstone's speech word for word. Nine of the reporters formed the note-taking corps proper; another took what is known as a "check-note," a third acted as "timekeeper." No. 1 took a short-hand note for one minute, No. 2 followed, and so on. No. 1, of course, had time to write up his notes before his turn came round after No. 9 had completed his note-taking. In the latter stages the "turns" were reduced to half a minute each. One reporter had charge of the collection and arrangement of the "copy," and as each "section" was ready, it was handed to a boy, whose duty it was to act as go-between from the reporters to an outside messenger at the door. From this door at the corn exchange to the newspaper office there was a chain of boys, each with a beat of about 200 yards. Each boy on receiving copy ran forward to his nearest neighbor, returning afterward to his former post, and in this way the various sections were delivered at the printing office in an incredibly short time—more quickly, indeed, than by cab or horse. At headquarters fifty-four compositors in their order each took a sheet of the "copy." The operation of setting up each sheet would only occupy three or four minutes. The report was out of hand within a minute or two of setting down, and all without a hitch.

TEN PONIES FOR A WIFE.

A PECULIAR STORY OF MARRIED LIFE IN TIBET.

Among the Tibetans a man marries only one wife, a belle often costing as much as ten ponies and thirty yaks. The price to be paid for the wife is arranged by a relative or a friend who acts as go-between, and the only marriage ceremony is a grand spree, lasting as long as the bridegroom can afford to keep it up.

The life of a Tibet woman in the part of the country cannot be deemed a hard one. She makes the tea, it is true, but with that the housekeeping ends; for no one ever dreams of cleaning the kettle afterwards, and every one has to mix his own tsamba and lick his bowl clean when he has finished. Every four or five years she may have to sew a new sheepskin gown for herself or for some one of her family, but certainly not oftener. She cannot herd the cattle or sheep; men must do that, as there is danger from marauders. She passes her time spinning yarn, weaving a coarse kind of cloth out of which bags are made, turning a prayer wheel, and—destroying too voracious vermin.

Her toilet requires rearranging only four or five times a year—when she visits Humlum or some other fair; she never washes herself or her garments, and her children cannot outgrow their clothes. They have only to let out a little of the folds of the gown, their unique garment, tucked up around the waist, and it will fit them until they are grown up.—Century.

Census Adventures in Alaska.

A recent report of progress in taking the census of Alaska has been issued by the U. S. Census Office in the form of a bulletin. It comprises a preliminary report by Mr. Ivan Petroff, special agent in charge of the Alaska division, and embodies a vivid picture of the difficulties encountered in getting results in the northern-most regions of the United States. After a preliminary trip in the mail steamer, a second trip was undertaken from San Francisco to the shores of the Behring Sea, at Nushegag, in a leaky little steamer of only twenty-five tons burden. Special agents for different sections were appointed and sworn in on these voyages. To reach one special agent a voyage up the Nushegak River was undertaken, but failed, owing to his recalcitrant Indian paddlers. On returning to Nushegak, the U. S. Commissioner's steamer Albatross took the party on board, and after six days landed them on an inhospitable shore, with a crew of Indians, mostly sick from pneumonia. The work in spite of all obstacles, was accomplished, Mr. Petroff having divided the territory into six districts and organized a force of special agents familiar with the many languages spoken there. His journeys aggregate some 12,000 miles, while the special agents will probably travel over five times as much ground to cover Alaska's 570,000 square miles of territory.—Scientific American.
