

COURT REJECTS DEATHBED WILL

Last Testament of Delia Louise
Trent Was Written by Husband.

DYING WIFE DICTATED TERMS.

After Completing the Writing, She Signed It. S. V. Trent Named as Executor Under Bond.

When the estate of Delia Louise Trent was called for probate in the Third district court today, the will written at the deathbed of Mrs. Trent was before the court for consideration. The will had been written by Mr. Trent at the deathbed of his wife at her dictation. After the will was written and read to her she signed it. This was the only will executed by the deceased, and Judge Armstrong today denied the petition for probate to enter it for probate. The estate is said to be worth $25,000 or more. Simon V. Trent, husband of the deceased, was appointed executor of the estate to serve under bonds of $4,000.

THREE UNRULY MEN.

J. Valentine, Harry Dale and William Dillman were arrested at Garfield yesterday on the complaint of a restaurant keeper of that place. The men are charged with having been drunk and disorderly and with having destroyed property of the cafe. They are in the county jail and a complaint will be issued against them today. Deputy Sheriff Sharp, Emery, Lead, Sperry and Smith were required to quell the disturbance created by the men.

IN R. T. BURTON ESTATE.

W. C. Burton, W. S. Burton and H. F. Burton were appointed administrators of the estate of Robert T. Burton today by Judge Armstrong. They are to serve without bonds.

ECHO OF BIG EXPLOSION.

Suit was entered by J. A. Halvorsen today against the Oregon Short Line railroad in which $61 is sought on 15 counts as damages against the company for injuries to the property of the plaintiff by reason of the nitrogen explosion on July 2 near Beck's hot Springs.

A HOME MADE HAPPY BY CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY.

About two months ago our baby girl had measles which settled on her lungs and at last resulted in a severe attack of bronchitis. We had two doctors but no relief was obtained. Everybody thought she would die. I went to eight different stores to find a certain remedy which had been recommended to me and failed to get it when one of the storekeepers insisted that I try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I did so and our baby is alive and well today. W. Spencer, Holly Springs, N. C. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy always cures and is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by all druggists.

OPTIMISTIC VIEWS ON AUTOMOBILE TRADE.

Special Correspondence.
New York, Dec. 3.—M. J. Budlong, whose experience in the automobile industry dates from its inception, and who was recently honored by being placed at the head of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, is very optimistic regarding the future welfare of the automobile. In an interview yesterday, the first since he entered on his new duties, he seemed to feel that notwithstanding the present financial situation, that by spring (which is the logical season in the sale of cars) the atmosphere would be entirely cleared and the general situation in better shape than heretofore. In part he said:

"That the speculations and frenzied finance of a few are to disrupt the economic conditions of the country is preposterous. There are too many sound and sane financiers of the old school to allow the disruption of the country's credit and by midwinter or early spring, entire confidence will be restored. Business will increase and the sale of cars of the right kind will continue as in the past."
"There is no doubt in my mind that the manufacturers or dealers of cars built solely to effect a quick sale, without thought of reliability, safety or quality are in a very precarious condition. The day of the car that is only built for a season is past. Look back to the cars built two, three and even four years ago and see the great number that are in use today. These are the cars whose makers were the pioneers of the industry, and who are in it to stay. Compare the various cars that were exhibited at the Garden Show, all of which were made by the members of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers. Note the stability of each type—the standard methods employed in construction—the strength, workmanship and style. That these cars have reached a state of near perfection is unquestioned. It has not been a matter of chance or luck that the group of licensed cars are superior in quality and workmanship to any other cars in the world. It has been the result of time, thought and co-operation. "The efforts and aim of the mechanical branch have resulted in the construction of the ideal car, and through this branch alone can the high standard of American cars be maintained. Compare the cars made by the branch with any other group and predict what the result of a depression in the industry would mean."

"The calamity howler and pessimistic prophet is ever abroad, but he has no place in the ranks of an honest and intelligent commercial enterprise. In the early spring, the weather conditions gave a momentary setback to the trade in one city, and the industry was immediately stirred to action, but what result? More business has been done this year than ever before. The ratio over last year's business is greater than the one before, and next year will convince every manufacturer and dealer that the motor car industry has come to stay. In 1904 there was $24,500,000 worth of automobiles sold; 1905, $45,000,000; 1906, $50,000,000; while up to Nov. 1, this year $78,000,000 worth were sold, showing an increase of $19,000,000 for the 10 months of this year over that of the entire year of 1905. This surely does not indicate lack of interest in the market for a high grade car, and I feel certain that if sound business principles, essential to every commercial enterprise, are observed, the ensuing year will find the industry established on a firmer basis than ever before."

"As to shows, I do not feel that the full effect of the early shows can be realized so soon. The result was so far beyond the expectations of the most optimistic of our members, that a careful analysis should be given before the early show is condemned. I am positive that had not the depressed condition of the money market prevailed, the records of the show last January would have been eclipsed this year. As it was, over $1,000,000 worth of business was done by the 32 members of the Licensed association and the electric vehicle makers who exhibit each year with us. The attendance, too, was but 10 per cent lower than the seventh national show."

"The adherence of good principles, sound business and the production of high grade cars must prevail, and if these elementary necessities of a successful enterprise are lived up to, there is no reason why they should not close as the greatest year in the history of the industry."

ANOTHER SATURDAY

We've come to look forward to Saturday with a good deal of pleasure. Not only because it brings us a large business—for that is the man's shopping day—but because we've found out that each good day's business makes for us new friends, who are satisfied customers first.

STATE JEWELS WERE STOLEN

THE sensational discovery of the disappearance from Dublin Castle of the precious regalia of the Order of St. Patrick is a most elegant reminder says London Tit-Bits, that even the most jealously guarded treasures are not always safe from the evil designs of clever, enterprising thieves. The crown of Holland, which is said to have cost £125,000 about 75 years ago, actually underwent the indignity of being stolen by burglars. For nearly two years they had it in their possession, and eventually some of the gems from it were found near Brooklyn, in the United States. The others subsequently came to light in Belgium, and were ultimately restored to their original place.

Perhaps the crown of Hungary has undergone more vicissitudes than any other European crown. A long time ago, owing to the extinction of the royal line, there were several candidates for the Hungarian throne, and eventually the Diet bestowed the crown on his own nominee. The next person to tamper with the crown was the widow of King Albert. Aided by one of her ladies, she stole it up in a cushion and smuggled it across the River Danube into German territory, where she herself sought refuge.

When pressed for ready cash she raised nearly £500,000 on the crown, which she pledged to the Emperor Frederick. Countless lives were lost and much blood was shed before it could be recovered and restored to Hungary, but once again there it was locked up in a strong fortress and guarded night and day. For the space of a couple of centuries the crown had a comparatively quiet time, though at the time of the revolution it had a narrow escape. In order to protect it from the Austrians it was buried by a band of patriots in a forest, where it lay concealed for nearly 20 years. It was then dug up from its hiding place, much the worse for its extraordinary experiences, and conveyed to the Hungarian capital. Since then the crown of Hungary has not figured so conspicuously in the romance of stolen royal emblems.

It was some 23 years since the regalia in the Tower of London had a narrow escape from the fate which has apparently overtaken that of the Order of St. Patrick. Having concocted a plot with three kindred spirits, a notorious rascal known to history as Col. Thomas Blood, induced the keeper of the crown jewels to admit him and his confederates to view them.

No sooner was the door of the chamber closed, in accordance with invariable practice, than a cloak was flung over the keeper's head, a gas thrust into his mouth and an iron book held in his nose. These impediments failing to quiet him, he was knocked down and stabbed, the thieves immediately making off with the crown and globe.

THEIR ESCAPE CAPTURED.

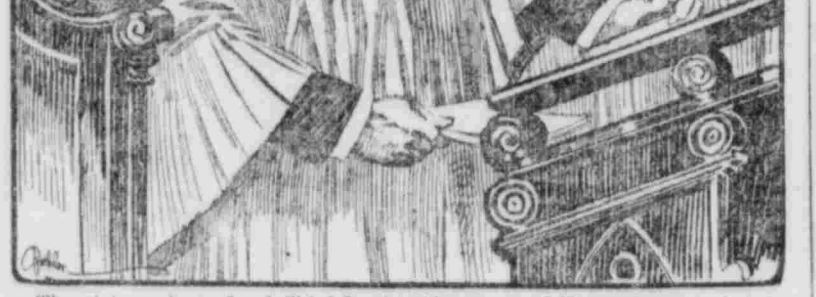

Next moment the keeper, who had been knocked senseless, regained consciousness, and hearing his shouts, his daughter rushed out screaming, "Treasure! treasure! The crown is stolen!" The thieves were speedily run down, and notwithstanding resistance, were captured with the jewels in their possession.

With an insolence all his own, Blood boasted that it was "a bold bid for a crown," and refused to make any confession except to the king in person. The effeminate curiosity of Charles II secured not only admission to the royal presence, but a pardon and a reward for his daring. In Irish estates worth £500 a year, which were granted to the daring ruffian.

Other crowns have been stolen at different times, among them that of Scotland. When the country was invaded by the English under Cromwell, the crown, with all the other royal regalia, was removed for safety to Dunnotar Castle.

Finally the invaders captured Edinburgh, and when they were laying siege to Dunnotar the defender of that place was urged to give up the crown and other property so that it could be concealed from the English in some remote castle in the Highlands.

This the officer refused to do, and consequently a plan for stealing the precious jewels was devised by a daughter of the Earl of Mar, which was successful and the crown was carried off by the wife of the minister of Kinross, a parish four or five miles distant from Dunnotar.

The picture shows Lord Chief Justice Alverstone of England engaged at his favored recreation, choir singing. He is the fortunate possessor of a fine voice, and he has been an enthusiastic church singer in the choir of St. Mary Abbot's, Kensington, for many years.
