

College were the College cadets, one company of young men and one company of young ladies, who saluted the procession upon its arrival. In the large chapel of the College the party laid away their wraps and overcoats and were welcomed to Logan by Mayor Kimball and to the College by Professor Paul.

The party at once made a visit to the class rooms for three quarters of an hour, under the escort of ushers.

Luncheon was prepared by the College cooking class and was excellent and thoroughly enjoyed by the legislators, who showed they could eat as well as make laws.

The College band furnished music while the cadets drilled in the presence of the Governor and others of the party, who were not visiting the class rooms. After luncheon a general inspection of the College and grounds was made and the lawmakers who had not been here before expressed gratification at the splendid appearance of the place, the beautiful view of the valley and the system of teaching and experimenting.

The day and sights were thoroughly enjoyed by the legislators and party and the kindness and hospitality of the city authorities, the College and board faculty and the people, much appreciated.

FILLMORE, Feb. 28.—A very deplorable affair occurred in Kanosh on the night of Feb. 26th, when Miss Emily Greener, residing at the house of her sister, Mrs. Halsey, took a large quantity of laudanum with suicidal intent; everything was deliberately planned, as the young woman had written a letter to her brother in Arizona, and also one "To Whom it may Concern," wherein she tells of the causes impelling her to the rash act.

It appears that the girl is twenty years old, and well spoken of by the people of Kanosh. In her childhood she was afflicted with rheumatism, which left a slight curvature of the spine. The citizens of Kanosh, noticing this, tried to induce her father, T. R. Greener, to take her where she could have skillful treatment; they even went so far as to try to find a law to compel him to do so, but failed. The father is a man of considerable means, but exceedingly penurious, therefore the poor girl has grown to be quite deformed.

A few days since Dr. Keen, of this place, was called to Kanosh to see a sick child of W. A. Halsey's; the girl being in the house, consulted her doctor about her own deformity and was informed that she was now beyond surgical skill in bringing about her heart's desire of becoming a straight-formed woman. This information seemed to blight all hope of life and she both bought and borrowed laudanum and swallowed a large quantity of it, after bidding her friends good night, telling them she was going to have a good long sleep.

She also wrote the letters referred to above, instructing her sister to pay her little debts from certain money she controlled and also telling her to send Miller, her brother, a lock of her hair," finishing with "good by and adieu."

The most pathetic part of her letters is wherein she charges her father with being the cause of her condition, through parental neglect, "especially as he has plenty of money." She appears to have had a dread of being buried alive, and requests the "doctor to stick some sharp instrument into my heart" to insure death before burial.

Her conduct excited suspicion and a short time after she retired, and had put on clean underclothing, her sister entered the bed room and found the girl unconscious. The best skill of the town was summoned and emetics given with the result that the young woman is still alive and in an interview told her own sad story, but recovery is still somewhat doubtful.

Leonora Carrim writes from Perry, Taylor county, Florida, inquiring the whereabouts of Joseph Campison, or any of his family in Salt Lake City or Utah. The gentleman was last heard from in this city. His sister Sarah C. Campison is very desirous of learning something of him. Write to Mrs. Leonora Carrim, at Perry, Taylor county, Florida. The names derived may not be exactly correct, but they are as near as we can make them out from the letters received.

"Old King Boreas went out on a tender Friday morning." So said the weather clerk and the records of the observer's office, hacked by reports of torn up trees, demolished fences, overturned buildings, missing signs and hapless pedestrians, proved that he told the truth.

The fact is that a veritable nor'wester struck the city at the hour of 5 a. m. It came unexpectedly and bore down upon the earth with a velocity that is seldom seen in these parts. For twenty-four hours previous there were indications of approaching atmospheric disturbances, but there were no visible evidences of such a commotion as that which occurred. For the period of about one hour the wind played fantastically with everything movable. Strongly built houses rocked on their foundations and many persons were rudely awakened by the noise without. A blinding snow storm set in and the policeman who was tramping his early morning beat sought the nearest friendly shelter, while hackmen and their teams were driven from the streets. At this time the wind was blowing a gale 46 miles an hour. At 6 o'clock it had fallen to 34 miles and during the day it varied from that degree to as low as 24.

A good deal of damage was done in a small way. At the post office a gale of wind struck the storm doors and wrecked considerable woodwork on the inside. Carpenters were put to work during the forenoon and by nightfall it is expected they will have repaired the damage. Fire and Police Commissioner Noble's store on East Temple street between First and Second South had the front, cornice and sign carried away. A rutterer's stand at the corner of Third South and East Temple was overturned and its contents widely scattered. As to broken shade trees and demolished fences, they could be found in all parts of the city. Reports from the county were rather meager.

The temperature throughout the day was somewhat uneasy, but at no time was it very low. Weather Observer Smith reported the average as being 32 degrees. At Cheyenne the temperature was 38, the velocity of the wind 28 miles, the sky clear; Havre, 10 degrees, velocity of wind, 28, snowing; Helena, 32 degrees, velocity of wind, 26, clear; Wlunemucco, 36 degrees, velocity of wind, 10, clear; Idaho Falls, 34 degrees, velocity of wind, 10 miles an hour.

The forecast for Utah for the next 24 hours is snow and rain in some parts of the State, followed by fairer and colder weather tomorrow night; for this city, colder weather.
