EVENING NEWS

BY TELEGRAPH AMERICAN.

WASHINGTON NEWS VASHINGTON, 13 .- Re

The republicans will not hold a caucus till Monday. A majority of senators did not agree to compromise. There was a suggestion to release senators from the action of the previous caucus, on a re-olution, but it was not pressed. The caucus still decidedly favors the President, but shows a disposition not to crowd matters until Robertson's case actually comes up. Administration sen-ators held that the former caucus should non-concur; others held that senators should vote henceforth as they individually propose.

The Chinese legation is in a quandary. Immediately on the reception of telegraphic intelligence of the death of the dowager emof the death of the dowager empress, the legation went into mourning, and after the practice of the nation, pig tails were tied with black. The entire legation, down to the house servants, were deterred from attending any entertainment or making merry in any manner. It now appears that the stipulated period of mourning must date its commencement from the receipt of the news by mail. This is imperative, and the legation finds that it has imposed upon itself, unnecessarily. two whole weeks of penitential a switch station on each farm, Pardee, Circuit Judge of the fifth judicial district; Malachai Kiebs, receiver of public moneys, Boise City, Idaho; Moses M. Bane, receiver of public moneys, Salt Lake, Utah. The Tunis Master.

A Tunis dispatch says: General Becard had an audience with the Bey yesterday, and read to him the article of treaty which provided that there shall be a French minister at Tunis to watch the execution of the without it. It has an excellent name. We had two children down with a strong with a spoon-handle in one night; the sores, or scales, were removed next morning with a spoon-handle and two days after the children were as well and two days after the children were as well as ever. If any question this testimony, they at his own request. at his own request.

Matthews, in an interview, said:

Well, I am confirmed by a majority of one vote. That is not much to brag of, is it? But considering the extraordinary move of the opposition to my confirmation, the victory is greater than it appears. I was at a terrible disadvantage in the contest. Charges made against me were such as I could not answer. It was asserted if I was on the bench I would act in a certain way. I could not answer that charge. It was certainly very unfair to attack me. It is all right to tackle a man about what he has done; to overhaul his public record; but to attack one for what it is presumed he will do that is unfair, because he cannot answer it. This mode of warfare put me in a very embarrassing position, for the very nature of it prevented me from making a reply. The fact that I was an Ohio man was used against me. It is known that some of the senators thought the vacancy should have been filled from another State. It has been a long, and to me, a very annoying situation. To be confirmed by a majority of one vote is nothing to boast of, but considering the extraordinary effort to defeat me it is perhaps a surprise that the mat. This mode of warfare put me in it is perhaps a surprise that the majority was not on the other side." There is a rumor that Senator Teller, who was paired with Sewell, of Alabama, telegraphs that he (Sewell) did wrong in voting for Matthews, as he (Teller) would oppose him, and wished the pair to hold. Sewell, who voted for Matthews under information that Teller would do so, was expected to move a reconsideration, and then refrain from voting for a confirmation, which would defeat Matthews.

The Postmaster-General directs that sample copies of new publica-tions cannot be mailed in quantities until submitted for ruling by the department. The department hears that parties start wildcat publications of apparently legitimate character, and contract with advertisers to circulate large quantities of the first issue, advertisers to pay in proportion to circulation at the office of mailing These papers have been inadvertently slipped into the mails at the rate of 2c. per pound, instead of paying third class rates, as they should.

Comments on the Compromise. New York, 13.—The Evening Post on Burke's compromise: In other words, the bonanza firms have found his case good enough to buy him off. But as they have not bought off a large number of stockholders whose injury is identical with Burke's, there exists naturally a good deal of bitter feeling. There is a bitter feeling, and it may be warranted, but if so it cannot clearly be assuaged. It does not appear, so ly be assuaged. It does not appear, so far as we can see, that Burke had any rights or claims which are not common to all other stockholders in the bonanza mines. It does appear that the persons sued were so far im-pressed with the cogency of the proceeding against them as to make that the persons sued were so far impressed with the cogency of the proceeding against them as to make a sacrifice to quash it. The road is therefore open to any stockholders to proceed in like manner, This will be the natural outcome of the compromise already made. It is proper to add, that if the sworn statements made in Burke's original complaint were sustained by evidence, something more than either civil suits or compromise should have followed the demonstration.
