Fifty Years Ago Cache Valley
Was Settled by a Band
Of Six.

EARLY DAYS ARE RECALLED.

Settlers in the Valley.

(Special to the "News.") LOGAN, May 7.—The half century anniversary of the settlement of Logan has passed into history. It was a success. The sturdy settlers who came into this then uninhabited stretch of mountain and plain in the early spring of 1859 in ox carts and many with no vehicle at all, were triumphantly conveyed at the head of the millions of parade in automobiles, preceded by military cadets and a brass band, and followed by thousands of young men and women, and children, now in attendance at the magnificent schools made possible through the devotion and sacrifice of these same pioneers. In this same parade, too, were half a hundred Indians, a remnant of the race of people who gave the early settlers much trouble, often causing bloodshed in their determination to exterminate from the face of the land the encroaching white settlers. This red remnant was decked out in all the glory of saturated headpiece and beplumed countenance of former days, but the savage of the olden days was absent, and some idea of the change which has come over the once warlike race of aborigines may be had when it is known that in this procession walked an Indian baseball team, consisting of nine husky-built men dressed in modern ball uniforms, and headed by a giant graduate of the Indian school at Car-leisle, who became famous at the school as a modern baseball and football player.

FIRST SETTLERS.

In the celebration yesterday the idea uppermost in the minds of the promoters was not only to honor the two surviving members of the first band of settlers who came to the banks of Little Logan river early in April, 1859, but also those who came to Logan or to Cache valley in that year. As far as history goes, Cache Valley was settled first in 1859 by Peter Maughan and three or four companies, who stopped on the south side of the valley at the town now known as Wells-ville. Maughan and his associates returned south the same year, but returned to Cache in 1858 and built at Wellsville a log fort, and for a time the place was known as Maughan's Fort.
These settlers remained on the south side of the valley, however, and it remained for the party of six, consisting of David Reese and his wife, Martha, who yet survive, and Griffith Charles, Simey Dibble and wife and Abraham V. Caldwell to press on north, crossing the main branch of the Logan river half a mile east of the present country road and pitching their tents on the slight eminence overlooking the south end of the valley, on the spot where the Deseret mills now stand, just below Temple hill.

SURVIVING PIONEERS.

Of the first band of six David Reese and wife still live in Logan; Griffith Charles, who remained a resident of the city until the time of his death, passed away about two years ago; and Dibble and wife, and Caldwell, the latter unmarried at the time of his arrival in the valley, moved to distant parts after a short time.
One of the features of the day was the unveiling ceremonies at the site of the monument on tabernacle square.
After the parade was over the meeting was held in the tabernacle. Excuse R. Martinson, son of J. H. Martinson, who came to Logan in 1860, and who was one of the stalwarts of those early times, opened the meeting by prayer. James A. Langston, son of one of the pioneers of Smithfield, delivered the oration, which was a masterly effort; Robert Thornley, 80 years old, a pioneer of Smithfield, told in his inimitable way some of the early experiences of the settlers of the valley, and music was discoursed by the band.

BALL GAME PLAYED.

The ball game, which was pulled off at the ball grounds on the B. Y. campus, was played by the Washakie Indian nine and a picked nine from the Boosters. The game was witnessed by 3,000 people and resulted in a victory for the Boosters by a score of 10 to 2. The line-up was as follows: Boosters: C. Gill; P. Drysdale; 1.
B. Brossard; 2. B. Cardon; 3. B.
Stoney; S. S. Morgan; L. P. Bankard; C. F. Spencer; R. F. Morton; Indians: C. Gill; P. Brown; 1. B. Maroni; 2. B. Will; 3. B. George; S. S. Frank; L. F. Thomas; C. E. Ren; R. F.
Phillips. Umpire, Tetter.

A hall at the Auditorium pavilion in the evening closed the day's festivities.
An account of the celebration of the first Twenty-fourth of July by the inhabitants of Logan, which was a memorable event, is told by Mrs.
Annie L. Farrell Hyde, one of the first settlers of the town:

A TALE OF INDIANS.

"On the 24, of July, 1860, the young men built a bower and were going to celebrate Pioneer Day, but the celebration came to a sad ending with what was nearly a battle with the Indians. The Indians were on the warpath, and at Smithfield they had just killed two men, John Reed and Ira Merrill. They also wounded Merrill's brother, Merrill stood over the body of his dead brother and by furious fighting prevented the Indians from scalping him. A lot of Indians were camped on Providence bench, just south and across the river from Logan. These came over to Logan on their ponies and were going to fight.
President Peter Maughan was here and told our boys to get their guns and stand ready to fight, but he said:
'Don't shoot, boys, unless I tell you to do so.' Then he rode out and talked with the Indian chief, and after considerable parleying, in which he agreed to furnish the redskins with flour, beef, etc., he appeased the Indians, and they rode off again to the hills. I shall never forget the sight. There were the Indians on their ponies all ready to charge, and there stood our men, rifle in hand to fire at a word from President Maughan; and there in between the two, stood the Pioneer of Cache trying to talk the Indians out of fighting. He was successful, and a levy was made for the beef and flour necessary to pacify the redskins, but our celebration ended for that year.

"The next year, 1861, the Indians were not so bad, and we decided to celebrate the Twenty-fourth in real earnest, and we did. The young ladies made a flag—the old Stars and Stripes —for the occasion, and a fine time they had. This flag—the first one to be unfurled in the breeze in Cache valley, was made by Miss Kate Tarbet, Mrs. Amanda Farrell, Miss Annie L.
Farrell and the Misses Benson, daughters of Apostle Ezra T. Benson, and was flown to the breeze over the bower on July 24, 1861.

CONTINENTAL BANK OFFICERS.

Cosgriff, President, Noble, Vice Prest. Boyer, Cashier, Curtis, Assistant.

At yesterday afternoon's meeting of the board of directors of the new Continental National bank, the following officers were chosen: President, J. E.
Cosgriff; vice president, W. P. Noble; cashier, T. W. Boyer; assistant cashier, H. D. Curtis. The capital stock of the new bank is $250,000, an increase of $50, 000 over that of the Commercial National bank. Mr. Boyer comes from the First National bank of Rock Springs, which has a capital and surplus of $210,000, and where he has been cashier for eight years. He received his early training in the Merchants' Bank of Canada, and has for years been identified with livestock and wool industries of Wyoming. Mr. Curtis is cashier of the Hailey National bank, but is serving here in a temporary capacity, until a permanent assistant cashier has been secured. The Continental National takes over the savings mittees.

OPPOSE LEASE OF RESORT

They Want the City to Undertake Improvement of Natural Features To be Found There.

Instead of leasing the warm springs to private parties, the council committees last night were asked by the representatives of the women's clubs to make the place a public park with public baths. The proposition was favorably received by the public grounds committee and their only anxiety is where to get the money to make the improvements as suggested. The proposition will be taken up and discussed, however, to see what can be done with it.

Those who appeared before the committees were Mrs. W. S. McCormick, Mrs. W. V. Ric, Mrs. C. E. Allen, Mrs.
Arthur Bird and Mrs. Fitzgerald. They were accompanied by Albert McCormick and George N. Lawrence, the latter acting as spokesman for them. The petition of McKenzie and Bros. was laid over until the entire matter is investigated. McKenzie asked the council to lease the property to him for five years at the rental of $300 a month.
The Seventh East street property owners were before the council last night and expressed their indignation at the council's refusal to approve the contract for the parking of the street from South Temple to Third South street. They asked for a renewal of a 20 foot park center because the street is so wide. The matter will come up Monday night when the property owners will submit a compromise agree-
