A party of Utah people arrived in Berlin today, including several released missionaries, and a few ladies from Salt Lake. The party has been touring France and Italy prior to returning to Utah, they are being chaperoned by Mr. Malcolm McAllister, formerly associated with the Deseret News advertising department.

The sad news comes from London that Miss Nannie Tout has recently undergone a severe operation for breast trouble. Her London relatives and friends are somewhat alarmed, but hope that nothing serious will result.

Miss Tout's friends in Berlin hope for her speedy recovery. Of course includes our little crowd, each and every one.

ROSTAND DOUBTFUL ABOUT HIS NEW PLAY

Special Correspondence.

ONDON, June 29.—It seems, after all, that it is not absolutely certain that Rostand will be able to produce Rostand's new play on his return from South America next fall. M. Rostand himself thinks it highly probable that he will consign it to the waste basket—or, at least, pigeon hole it indefinitely. The author of "Cyrano" long has been known as about the most conscientious of dramatists, but he has surpassed himself in pains-takingness in constructing his latest play. This is, of course, the remarkable drama, "Chantecler," on which he has been working for so long, and which, it can be stated now, was inspired by the old French fable, "Heyard and the Fox." At first Rostand left grave doubts as to whether a play wherein all the characters were birds or animals could be made acceptable. Then, however, it occurred to him that Aeschylus had a certain amount of success with similar material, and depicted the play in such a way as to meet the advantage of the classical Greek author in the modern stage effects at his command. So he set to work planning the grouping of his characters and building up his scenes, all with wonderful ingenuity and simply infinite attention to details.

For many months he has given himself up entirely to "Chantecler," abandoning entirely his ordinary practice of working on another play at the same time. He has, however, no personal objection, but the author says he "does not know about it." He thinks that the work of imagination, like a bottle of wine, should be left to mature. So he is going to put the piece away in a drawer for at least three months, trying meanwhile to forget all about it, and hopes that at the end of that time to seen it with the critical eye of the spectator. And, as observed already, he believes it will be within the bounds of possibility for him to write the whole thing aband and condemn it in which case his admirers will have to manage for at least a couple of years longer without a new work from M. Rostand.

"I am over here for business, not for a holiday," said James K. Hackett to the writer when encountered at the Hotel Savoy last night before last. To begin with, Mr. Hackett is making arrangements for the production of "Sparta," a piece on the War of Jephtha, with which he will open at the New York Savoy on Sept. 28. Arthur Bourchier played the piece for the two hundred and fiftieth time at the Garrick a few nights ago. Hackett has also been seeing the two plays by James Bernard Fagan, "Hawthorne, U. S. A." and "Under Which King?" recently produced in London, on both of which he has options for American use, but it

Playgoers here are looking forward to seeing Arthur Bourchier provide another two hundred and fiftieth time of the same story which is to the English what Tree of Paris, Faust, and Faustina Collin Nolet, while the fiftieth of "Medea" will be in the hands of W. E. Abingdon, who was George Morley in Gilbert's production of "Skelebeck-Holmes."

RICHARD R. LYMAN.

Well Known Young Utah Educator Just Made a Doctor of Philosophy by Carroll University.

A signal achievement in education is that attained this month by Richard R. Lyman, professor of civil engineering at the University of Utah. Award has just been received here of the venerable degree of master of the faculty of civil university in granting him the degree of doctor of philosophy, which is the highest degree offered by American universities. The action comes at the beginning of the first year of his professorship at the University of Utah.

During the past year he taught one year at his Ph.D. alma mater, then accepted a position as assistant in civil engineering at the University of Utah. In 1900 he was made a full professor of civil engineering after rising through the positions of assistant and associate professor.

In 1901 he secured a leave of absence to undertake the study which has now resulted in his receiving the degree of Ph. D. He spent the first summer studying at Chicago, and two full school years and two summers at Cornell, securing in 1902 the degree of M. E. C.

During the past year he has been on the faculty of civil engineering at the University of Utah, and during two of graduate fellowships he has been on the faculty of the same department. With the summer spent in residence work, the thesis for which the degree was granted was prepared during the last winter in Salt Lake, from notes made in the laboratories at Cornell and Chicago.

The thesis, which has just been passed upon, was sent June 1 to Dr. Irving P. Church, head of the department at Cornell, and Dr. Church was favorably reported to the faculty. Mrs. Lyman, wife of Earl of Tyrone, died on June 17, 1904, at Los Angeles.

In 1901 he left for the University of Michigan, where, after undergoing the discipline which he has spent his best efforts as a sophomore and again as a senior, he was class president and on graduating was presented on behalf of his class with the degree of Bachelor of Civil Engineering at the University of Michigan.

At earliest he went to Provo to attend the Brigham Young University, and immediately thereafter going to Salt Lake City, where he studied at the Brigham Young college of Logan.

That summer he left for the University of Michigan, where he has spent his best efforts as a sophomore and again as a senior, he was class president and on graduating was presented on behalf of his class with the degree of Bachelor of Civil Engineering at the University of Michigan.

At about Park, N. J., Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Price have taken a cottage and with their two children, have settled down for the summer. Mr. Price is engaged in the construction of a house in the country, and is planning a summer engagement at the Auditorium, where he has been for several seasons, and where he is the greatest favorite among the most prominent leaders.

Mrs. Joseph Russell, Mrs. Price's mother, will leave Salt Lake in July, for the east, to join her daughter at the Park, where she will remain until their return to New York.

Mrs. M. Fisher and her daughter Sallie were the guests of C. B. Dillingham at "Hidden Brook Farm," White Plains, Westchester Co., last Sunday for luncheon and dinner. The "Farm" is the joint property of Chas. Dillingham and C. B. Dillingham, and is the scene of many a social gathering. Westchester County is famous for its beautiful homes, some of them vast estates, surrounded by numerous trees and lawns overlooking the Hudson and its tributary, Woodstock, where nature needs little help from man to improve her beauty.

Last week Mr. Tracy Cummings, of New York, made his first call on his friends in New York, being here on business, and in between, and in time limited, he could only see "friends" and "good beef" in New York. Mr. Cummings left for Boston Friday, and will be in New York again Monday for two days, and then back to Chicago and San Francisco.

Mr. Alex. Nitkin of Russia arrived in the city on the 25th, and will remain until the 28th, and is expected to be married to Mr. and Mrs. Attila Jaccard at 120 Amsterdam Avenue, Mr. Nitkin's brother, Joseph, and his wife, formerly Miss Ada (Mrs.) Nitkin, of Russia, will reach New York today on their way to Canada, and the wedding on an extended bridal tour will end with their return to Russia in October.

On Wednesday Mrs. John A. Harms, wife of John A. Harms, left with her husband Mr. and Mrs. Leontine, of 225 West 125th Street, in the summer. Mrs. Harms has not been well for several months, and it is hoped a visit to the noted mountain air of Colorado will restore her.

Miss Edith Huntington of Danbury, R. I., has been visiting with her aunt and uncle, Mrs. M. L. and Mrs. W. S. Huntington, and will be a member of their household until Aug. 1, which is to be a month's tour of Connecticut and Long Island.

At Sunday's services, Elmer Murray K. Jacobs was appointed by President McQuarrie to succeed President Mrs. Easton as president of the Brooklyn conference. Elder Jacobs is a young man to fill so responsible a position, but is in every way qualified to do his duty to the church to the best of his ability, and it was regarded as a wise choice.

There were three representatives of the Seville family at Sunday services—Lester, business manager of the Seville firm; Walter, his assistant, and Alva H., a Harvard student, who is just leaving his home in Ogden, and Lester's two brothers, Lester and Walter, will take in the sights of the city before going to Chicago to finish on their business. Mr. Alva Seville has been a near neighbor of Prof. Geo. Marshall, and family all winter in Cambridge, and brings word great believer in his talents, and in many ways proved his friendship. There is no doubt that he would have brought Mr. Crabb to the front in a short time, had he lived. His death, like that of Koko la Shelle, leaves a great gap in the theatrical world.

At the 80, Nicholas "beer garden"—better known as Bishop Potier's "beer garden"—there is quite a stir among the many patrons. A published announcement that lovers of certain American composers would have a chance to hear their favorite pieces played by that excellent orchestra by means of a ballot, created an excitement among all interested in the musical aspects. Voting will be given out night on which the audience writes the name of their favorite the author, and choice of composition in the contest closing July 1st. On Saturday Conductor Warren sent for the first orchestral score of "La Parisienne" by E. Dewey Richards, the same to be played within the next two weeks. Mr. and Mrs. Richards and their son Jack are about to leave for Europe for a few weeks, holding, but Mr. Richards remained in town long enough to confer with Conductor Warren, and make arrangements for the introduction of "La Parisienne." To Mr. Richards' tenacity this can not be no surprise, his stability and talents have long been recognized among all interested in the musical aspects. Voting will be given out night on which the audience writes the name of their favorite

THE HERALD OF DEATH.

True Story of the Origin of the Famous Ghost of the Beresfords.

ADY WATERPOPPER's death which just now announced by cable, and which places in mourning her son, Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, who has just returned to England from a visit to this country, has doubtless been heralded by the supernatural appearance of Lady Beresford, wife of Sir Thomas Beresford, and the ancestor of Lord Charles. Lady Beresford had a romantic affection for the Lord Tyrone of her day, and died with doubts and fear as to the value of their religious opinions, then made no written promise to one another that whencever the two first died should be permitted by the Almighty appear to the survivor for the purpose of revealing the secrets of the divine plan. The discovery being placed on written record in both men, namely, the place and the first of the Beresfords to die, Lady Beresford had taken place on the 25th of June, 1872. Her husband died on the 1st of August, 1873, and his widow, who was very ill, died on the 2nd of August, 1874. She had predicted in her will that her spirit would appear to her husband, and that he would come to her aid in time of need. She had also directed that her spirit should appear to her husband, and that he would come to her aid in time of need.
