In Women's World.

The trained nurse goes into battle encouraged by none of the blood-stirring incidents of the soldier. She is often entirely alone; her struggle must be quiet, and her antagonist is grim and terrible and ever watchful, because it is death itself. Suppose you are suddenly smitten in the midst of your life and work, says Anne O'Hagan in the February Delicater. With the coming of the trained nurse you feel infinite relief and thanksgiving. You are no longer obliged to struggle alone, to watch the door alone lest that other one enter. The nurse, calmest of warriors, least grim of venturers, sits beside your bed and will keep the vigil for you. You transfer the battle to her. For yourself, you will lie still and think—not of the combat before you, not of the turmoil behind you—that whirling, dusty conflict of the world which was so important a little while ago—but of the great, important things—earth and its greenness, the wild, white, country skies on moonlight nights, the flash of bluebirds' wings in the sunshine, all the daily miracles you had forgotten.

BRAIDINGS THAT SIMULATE EMBROIDERIES.

Very effective trimmings for a suit, of plain cloth are braidings of soutache that take the form of embroideries. In the pictured costume of navy blue broadcloth they follow the neckline and fronts and ornament the front panels of the box pleated skirt in motif designs. A surplus vest of blue velvet is trimmed with double rows of silver braid, and the turnback cuffs are banded with the velvet finished on both edges with the braid. Wide brimmed chapeau of leghorn has underbrim facing of silk and trimmings of silk and heron alskettes.

rolling each one over in it; fry in deep, hot fat, till they are like fritters.

It's easy to have pretty nails if you'll only half try yourself. And in an imaginary conversation with one who knew, a yid writer in The Delicater tells the secret.

"First they must be washed and scrubbed—and I think one must learn how to wash the hands as well as to do anything else. I never saw hands really washed before, with the brush all over them, until they glowed. After that, with scissors and a file she trimmed the nails into shape. She likes them rounded, not pointed, and just long enough in the middle to balance the half-moon below. She warned me against cutting the cuticle, as that makes the flesh grow thicker.

"Her plan is to take an orange stick and to push the flesh back from the nail, getting under the edges so as to loosen the skin. But this must be done gently. When one is rough about it, the young nail is injured, and this brings those white spots on the nail which are so ugly. As mine were being done for the first time she had to cut some of the hangnails, but she said I would never have any more if I used the orange stick every day, and always rubbed the flesh back from my nails whenever I used a towel. Orange sticks are better than steel because they do not bruise. You can get a whole bunch for 10 cents. She told me, too, that she always kept a piece of lemon on her washstand, to take off stains. The lemon also whitens the hands when it is rubbed over them."

The most attractive things about any woman—in a man's eyes at least—is not a chance beauty or expensive and stylish dressing, but daintiness and scrupulous neatness in her personal appearance. There is no excuse for the woman who wilfully refuses to be careful about the little things. She knows how to choose her clothes and how to wear them, yet does not do so. You meet her today looking radiant, distinguished, beautifully dressed. You meet her two weeks later, and it is with difficulty that you recognize either the woman or the clothes. Her gown is wrinkled, her shoes have not been cleaned, and it is only too obvious that she does not take the trouble to keep them on shoe-trees. A button is missing from one glove, and an ever-widening rip shows on the seam of the other. Her hair has been hastily arranged and does not fill out the wide frame of her picture-hat. The average woman can keep herself and her clothes in order unless she is indolent and indifferent. If she does not know how to care for her hair and hands, she cannot spend a few dollars more profitably than in taking lessons from a capable professional. Women of this last class cannot be helped by any one else. Everything lies in their own hands, and the impetus must come from within.
