WONDERFUL EXTENT OF INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER CO.'S BUSINESS

The handsomest and most expensive thing in the way of fine book work recently seen in Salt Lake lies on the desk of General Manager Geo. T. Odell of the Consolidated Wagon & Machine Co. The book in question is a volume recently issued with the compliments of the International Harvester Company, whose headquarters are at Chicago, and "News" representative who turned over the pages yesterday found a wonderful fund of interesting data within its covers. The book is issued to give an idea of the extent of the business carried on by the International Harvester Company, which, as is generally known, combines several implement and machine companies brought together through the genius of J. Pierpont Morgan.

The book is filled with beautiful illustrations, one of the most instructive being the Harvester building in Chicago. This edifice is 14 stories high and is where the general offices make their headquarters. It employs about 1,200 employees necessary to do the office work in Chicago of this large institution.

The other pictures show in detail the plants of the institution, which include the manufacturing plants at Akron, Ohio; all the different plants in Chicago; the manufacturing Canadian plant at Hamilton, Ontario; the Milwaukee Works at Sterling, Ill.; the Milwaukee plants; the manufacturing plants at Auburn, N. Y., at Plano, Ill., at Waterloo, Iowa, at Newark valley and also the large wagon manufacturing plant owned by the Weber property, Chicago, in addition to which is the European manufacturing plant at Norrköping, Sweden, and the Flax Twine Mills at St. Paul, Minn.

The book also refers to the warehouse buildings and the one hundred general agencies of the company established throughout the United States and Canada.

A picture shows the marvelous extent to which the Harvester Co. has systematized its business. It goes back to first principles of operating in obtaining its raw product, and is the owner of numerous iron ore properties, timber lands, railroads, etc., all of which are used in getting the raw material to the factories.

The many lines of goods turned out by this concern are well known to practically every little mention. They are of course headed by the McCormick Harvesting machinery, and it is this line that the Consolidated Wagon & Machine company, together with the binding, seed, gasoline engine, pump, sprayers and many other articles obtain from the International Harvester Co., who employ in the manufacture of their goods in excess of twenty thousand men and women who are paid annually many million dollars in wages, and amongst whom are found two hundred skilled inventors and designers; in addition to this, the company's thousands employ many thousands of men and women. The company's plant covers seven hundred acres, or more than a square mile of manufacturing facilities. The merger of the different implement concerns and its consequent selection of the keenest and most experienced men for this particular line of trade. This resulted in the choice of Cyrus H. McCormick as president, with a directorate associated with him who has gained their past experience in the conduct of their individual manufactures.

While it is impossible to mention in this brief article the names of all the great enterprises which have succeeded in building up and systematizing this immense organization, it is only fair to call attention to the ability and individuality of its president, Cyrus H. McCormick, and the general manager, Geo. T. Odell, and his assistant, Alex. Legge, also to the general sales manager, A. E. Mayer. All of these gentlemen came up from the ranks in the company, and have been successful in having worked their way to the top through their untiring energy and perseverance.

Manager Odell, when asked for a personal expression of his experience in doing business with this large concern, which is generally known (but improperly) as "The Harvester Trust," said very emphatically, that he was convinced that the general manager, Geo. T. Odell, and his assistant, Alex. Legge, also to the general sales manager, A. E. Mayer. All of these gentlemen came up from the ranks in the company, and have been successful in having worked their way to the top through their untiring energy and perseverance.

The International Harvester Company has maintained an office in this city, which for some years past has been under the able and efficient control of Mr. S. Seal, an estimable gentleman whose efforts in regulating the conditions of trade are much appreciated by the Consolidated Wagon & Machine Co. and the other concerns in this city to whom the Harvester people sell their goods.

Mr. Odell was greatly pleased at the outlook for business for the current year, and with the reports made of the past year, and the past year, all of which was submitted to the stockholders on Monday last, who expressed themselves as being entirely satisfied.

The banquet, which was given by the Consolidated Wagon & Machine Co. to its employees, were held in Montpelier, Jan. 14th; Logan, Jan. 15th; Ogden, Jan. 16th; and at Idaho Falls, Jan. 17th. The banquet was a success, as they have brought together the officers and employees on a common footing, which has resulted in the exchange of ideas all along the line; at these banquets the employees of the company, all the employees that the greatest harmony prevails in the ranks of the Consolidated Wagon & Machine Co.
