DAVID O. CALDER.

HE GIVETH HIS BELOVED SLEEP.

BY ANTONIA DICKSON.

A little child rests on a bed of pain,
With an aching head and a throbbing brain;
A feverish flush on the soft cheek lies,
And a wistful look in the sweet blue eyes—
As the sick child moans: "How the slow hours creep!
Will the Lord not send to His little one sleep?"

And the mother smoothed from the child's brow fair
The clustering locks of her golden hair,
And murmured: "My darling, we cannot tell;
But we know that the Father doth all things well;
And we know that never a creature in pain
Addressed a prayer to His mercy in vain.
Time has no line that His hand may not smooth;
Life has no grief that His love cannot soothe;
And the fevered brow shall have rest at last,
In the healing shade of the Death-Cross cast.
Look up, my precious one; why shouldst thou weep?
The Lord giveth aye to His loved ones sleep."

And the little one gazed with a glad surprise,
In the loving depths of those patient eyes,
Then lifted her lips for one long embrace,
And turned with a smile on her weary face.

And the mother smiled as the early morn
Marked the deep peace on the childish form,
And cried aloud in her thankfulness deep:
"The dear Lord be praised, who hath given her sleep!"

Ay, mother—she sleeps, in that charmed repose,
That shall waken no more to earth's pains and woes,
For the Saviour hath gathered His lamb to His breast,
Where never life's storms shall her peace molest.
His dear love willed not that time should trace
One sorrowful line on that innocent face;
Others less favored might suffer their share
Of the midnight toil and noontide glare;
Others might labor, others might weep,
But "the Lord giveth aye to His loved ones sleep."

THE WAYS OF SINFUL CITIES.

A TIMELY RESCUE.

On last Friday night, between ten and eleven o'clock, Mrs. Josephine Milburn, a respectable young married woman, residing with her husband at No. 91 East Broadway, was on her way home through the Bowery. At the corner of Grand street she was accosted by a youth named William Pope, who followed and stopped her. Mrs. Milburn, in an angry tone, asked him what he meant. The ruffian replied, "Excuse me, but you know my sister, Lizzie Seller." Mrs. Milburn remembered that she had worked with that person at Friedman's artificial flower store, corner of Catharine and Division streets, and answered that she knew Lizzie very well. "She is stopping down here at No. 298 Mott street, and would be glad to see you; will you come down?" returned Pope. Mrs. Milburn consented to go. No. 298 Mott street is a German boarding house, kept by one Henry Ripple. The police say it is a disreputable concern and that a very bad class of young men are its tenants. The lights were lit in the hallways when Mrs. Milburn and Pope got there and went up stairs to the second landing, when a door opened and the unsuspecting woman was ushered into a room with several beds in it. There was no female there except herself; but several ill-looking men lay around on the beds. She at once realized her situation, and with a scream, darted to go out, when immediately the lights were all turned down and one of the miscreants seized her roughly by the arm. She struck the wretch in the face with her parasol, and he letting go his hold Mrs. Milburn sprang to the open window and attempted to jump out. Her dastardly assailants held her back, and her cries by this time brought officer Brush, of the fourteenth precinct, to the scene. He rushed up stairs and found the frightened woman about to pitch herself into the street. He seized hold of her and dragged her inside. With the assistance of other officers he subsequently arrested Pope, Joseph Anderson and Eugene Bain. The rest of the gang escaped.

The prisoners were taken before Justice Murray at the Tombs Police court yesterday. Anderson and Bain were discharged, as they could not be identified. Pope was fined $10 and committed to the Island for one year in default of $1,000 bail for his good behavior. Pope said he was a printer.—New York Herald, Aug. 14.

RUINED AND CAST OUT.

This forenoon a colored woman, giving the name of Maggie Bartlett, was brought before Justice Scully, charged with conspiracy to reduce to prostitution a young and innocent girl. Owing to the absence of another party implicated in the affair, the case was continued until Thursday, in bail of $500. The principal witness in the case, a girl scarcely fifteen years of age, said that her name was May Edmunds; that she lived with her parents in a little town in Ohio until a few days ago, when she determined to leave home and seek employment of some kind in Chicago. She arrived here one day last week, and not knowing what to do first, she took some ladies' belts and went from house to house trying to dispose of them, at the same time looking out for some cheap boarding house. Last Thursday, while canvassing the West Side, she saw a card on a neat-looking house on Peoria street, a few doors from Randolph street, announcing that furnished or unfurnished rooms could be had here at reasonable rates. She rang the door-bell, and the ring was answered by a colored woman. Making known her wants, she was invited in to look at the rooms. She saw one that suited her, and on asking this colored woman the rates at which she could have the room and board, was told that it would be only $3 a week. The price was satisfactory, and she engaged the room. This was in the forenoon, and she had all the rest of the day to sell her belts. At the request of the colored woman, who gave the name of Bartlett, Miss Edmunds left a part of her belts as security. She was told to come home early, in order to get her supper. She did as requested, and after eating a hearty meal she was taken into a back room and introduced to two men. From the conversation of the men and the woman Bartlett, which was coarse, with an oath thrown in occasionally, a suspicion crossed the girl's mind that something was wrong, and that the character of the house was none of the best. She demanded to be let out, but without avail. The actions of the parties frightened her, and she began to cry, whereupon the men threatened to kill her if she made any noise. One of them, who was called Johnson, assaulted her, and silencing her by threats of instant death, the burly ruffian accomplished his base designs. She was then given a part of her belts and turned out of doors, ruined and disgraced. Not knowing what to do, she found an attorney and told her story. He advised her to swear out a warrant for Maggie Bartlett, and the warrant was served and the party arrested. The detectives are looking for the man who assaulted her. Miss Edmunds is a prepossessing looking girl.—Chicago Journal.

SEC. 9.—All ordinances and parts of ordinances relating to the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors, in conflict herewith, are hereby repealed: Provided the repeal of such ordinances shall not affect any rights accrued or liabilities for fines and penalties incurred; but all such rights and liabilities may be maintained and enforced the same as if said ordinances and parts of ordinances had remained in full force.
