WATER SUPPLY AND DRAINAGE.

THERE are two very important subjects which must engage the attention of our municipal authorities, and which will force themselves upontheir consideration with increasing force as the years pass on. The first is, water supply; the second drainage.

As our beautiful city extends its borders, reaching out to all points of the compass, occupying dry and desert places and bringing them into cultivation, the necessity for an increase of water becomes more and more apparent, and the demand grows stronger for the indispensable element for irrigating as well as culinary purposes. The method adopted for increasing the volume of City Creek is worthy of praise, and a similar course in regard to other streams may help the matter in some degree. But it is annually becoming more and more apparent that a much greater quantity of water is needed by this city than the available streams, with whatever auxiliaries possible, are likely to supply. Where shall we look for the remedy?

It is proposed by some very practical thinkers that water be brought from Utah Lake, part of the way by the Jordan and the rest of the way by canal along the eastern benches. Others propose taking the streams south of City Creek and bringing them northward, supplying their places to those who now use them by the contemplated canal. But there are objections to these plans, as they affect vested water rights which cannot be justly or legally subverted, and they involve great expense, also the uncertainties of a supply by a canal constructed through different soils and liable to breakage; and it is a question whether a canal can be conducted to the points desired, of sufficient size to supply any but the requirements of the southern district.

An artesian well is now being sunk on the bench northeast of the city. It is confidently hoped that it will prove successful. But it is now clearly evident that, successful or not, it will be exceedingly costly, much more so than at first anticipated. If a good flow of water should be obtained at that point, it will be of great benefit to one section of the city. But we are of the opinion that there are much greater probabilities of obtaining an artesian supply from wells sunk at the foot rather than at the upper part of the benches. Visitors to California will notice that the artesian wells there are mostly so situated, and we believe that experience in that State has proven that just below, not upon the high benches, is the most feasible point for their construction.

We suggest this point for the consideration of the City Fathers. We believe that artesian wells can be bored at the foot of the benches, without the immense outlay necessary for their construction nearer the mountains, and with much more likelihood of tapping the water veins. The supply would be contiguous and reliable for the lower portions of the city, and the streams now used below could be utilized above; the urgent wants of the bench residents could thus be met and much land now almost worthless, be rendered valuable and beautiful. The best plan is the cheapest in the long run. We do not say that this is the best, but we draw attention to it, trusting that the matter will be carefully weighed and judged upon its merits.

Drainage is a subject requiring as careful consideration as that of the supply of water. As our population increases, waste matter accumulates; and unless some efficient means are provided for the removal of the decaying material, sickness and death are certain to result. The complete sewer system of the British metropolis is considered one of the chief reasons of its low death-rate. With all the sanitary disadvantages of the close association of nearly four millions of inhabitants, London ranks among the healthiest cities of the world. Its refuse is not allowed to lie upon the surface of the ground, but is carted beyond its limits or carried away in its immense sewers into the Thames.

The yellow fever, now ravaging the cities of the South, is believed to originate from impure matter festering in the rays of the summer sun, and sending forth invisible germs, which are the seeds of suffering and destruction. A thoroughly drained city, cleansed from decaying animal and vegetable matter, is not likely to be attacked with this awful disease, unless in such close proximity to its source as to receive the floating germs wafted upon the heated air. The fatal fevers that have spread destruction and woe have been, latterly, traced to imperfect drainage or polluted water. We firmly believe that the death rate of Salt Lake City has been greatly increased through the quantity of impure waste material thrown out of doors and left to rot upon the surface of the soil, and through decient means of drainage.

This, then, is a subject that must also engage the attention of our City Fathers, and a system of drainage will have to be adopted, or the sanitary condition of this fair-appearing city will be truly deplorable. With its gradual slope towards a river of considerable volume, and its uniform division into streets and blocks, this city is admirably adapted for a thorough sewage system modeled upon the best known methods.

But defective sewerage is worse than none. The escape of sewage gas into houses has caused more typhoid fever in large cities, perhaps, than anything else. Unless means are adopted to cleanse the sewers that receive the drainage, they become obstructed and charged with an obnoxious gas that is fearful in its deadly force. What is done for this city should be done well, and as the time is drawing very near when a system of drainage will be an absolute necessity, the subject should be studied now, and the experience of the world in relation to it should be invoked, so that we may profit by the failures and triumphs of others, and be able to arrive at the best method of accomplishing what is desired.

Plenty of good water for domestic, agricultural and general use, and an efficient system of drainage, would remove many of the wastes and lighten many of the burdens of Salt Lake society.

An Independent Candidate.

NEW YORK, 2. — J. Madison Wells, annouuced that he is an independent candidate for Congress in the 4th district of Louisiana. He says to the voters of the district, "In doing this I forbear none of my well known pretensions as republican, but address myself as a native Louisianian to Louisianians, who are, in a large measure, weary of the fruitless promises and sinister designs of the old straight out democracy, and who desire to avail themselves of more effectual instrumentality to rebuild their commonwealth and to compass stable harmony between all classes within her border." He has been for years a member of the old whig party, whose increasing demand for internal improvements became one of the tenets of the republican party and has been combated by the democracy of the Union down to the present hour. I adhere to my life-long conviction that Louisiana needs, and should have, such liberal appropriations of national moneys as may quicken her to development and prosperity, which many of the western States, much younger than Louisiana have, under liberal republican policy, been permitted to command. A protective system of levees to save from overflow, our alluvial lands in the Mississippi Valley, and the completion of the Texas Pacific Railroad, are objects of especial importance which can never be attained save by republican representatives in Congress.

Loss of two British Vessels.

The Oceanic brings news to San Francisco of the loss of two British vessels. The ship Lord of the Isles from Australia to Manilla; and the bark Queen from Singapore to the Island of Palaos. The crew of the Lord of the Isles have arrived at Hong Kong from Manilla. The captain and eight or nine of the Queen's crew are drowned.

One More on Kearney.

Concerning Kearney's relations with the Roman Catholics, the Freeman's Journal says: "It so happened that Kearney's demonstration in Indianapolis, on Sunday, came in competition with the demonstration of welcome to the new bishop of the diocse; and the result furnished additional proof that the blatant communist from California can expect neither comfort nor countenance from the great body of the Catholic Church. The new bishop was welcomed by a vast crowd of people, glad of the opportunity to show their respect for his holy office, and Kearney was neglected with conspicuous contempt. The street procession which was to have received and escorted him to the picnic grounds numbered no less than 69 by actual count. The sandlot orator could not help feeling the chill. He complained of fatigue and his speech to the small crowd in the grove was brief and spiritless. The Indianapolis demonstration was a significant sample of the estimate held of Kearney among western workingmen. He is a failure as a sensationalist in this longitude and he ought to lose no time in returning to the open arms of the Frisco hoodlums.

More High Rates.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Co., will to-morrow issue a new tariff, advancing their rates to approximate the recent advance in rates by the Union and Central Pacific railroads.

Yellow Fever.

WASHINGTON, 2.—In response to the dispatch from Memphis asking for nurses with yellow fever experience, twelve ladies and two gentlemen have volunteered their services; and a delegate from the Soldier's Home offers his services and those of 65 other soldiers of the Home to serve as watchmen, police, nurses, or in any capacity without compensation.

Cincinnati, O., 2.—A Miss Davis, from New Orleans, was removed to the city hospital last week, suffering from yellow fever. Her case to-day is considered very critical.

A death from yellow fever is reported from Franklin, Ohio.

New York, 2. — Subscriptions for yellow fever sufferers to-day reach $2,900. Total subscriptions to date are $44,637.

Memphis, 2. — To-day opened clear and warm, and with our little force of workers nearly exhausted. The fever continues without any abatement. It is impossible to obtain the new cases to noon for the reason that physicians are not required to report before 5 p. m. Undertakers report 43 yellow fever interments up to noon, and indications are that the death list will be as large as yesterday.

A number of negroes, some of them drunk, assembled before the commissary depot this morning, and, becoming riotous, made a rush for the doors. They were kept back by colored military on guard, but a second attempt being made, the guards fired, killing one negro. The doors were closed and General Lake E. Wright spoke to the crowd and quiet was restored for the time being. The committee is doing all in its power to supply the people with food, but some of the negroes are dissatisfied.

Port Gibson, 2.—Four hundred cases of yellow fever. Fifty-five deaths out of the 550 persons remaining in town. About 1,200 fled. Distress very great. The sick are dying, with no one to give them a drink of water.

New Orleans, 2.—New cases 195; deaths 77.

Mexican Troubles.

GALVESTON, 2.—A special from Rio Grande City, yesterday, says: An edict went into effect abolishing the Zona Libra except as to Matamoras and New Laredo, and prohibiting commercial intercourse at other points. The people on the Mexican side are much exasperated, especially at Camarga and Mier, and have sent a violent and threatening protest to the central government.

Secretary Sherman.

WASHINGTON, 2.—Secretary Sherman resumed his duties to-day. He expresses himself as much pleased with his reception in Ohio. In reply to a question concerning the truth of the statement that the people of Toledo did not want to hear him, he says that interruptions for a time, while he was speaking at the Opera House, came from about 25 persons in the gallery, but did not seriously annoy him, otherwise there was no occasion for complaint, and the proceedings passed pleasantly.

Public Debt Statement.

The Book of Mormon in the Schools.

PAYSON, August 30th, 1878.

Editors Deseret News:

The propriety of introducing the Book of Mormon as a text book in the schools of the saints is a subject that has frequently been alluded to of late, by men interested in the welfare of the rising generation.

Permit me, through the columns of the NEWS, to give your readers a little of my experience and some of my views on the subject.

I will premise by saying, this is no new suggestion. Many years ago President Young advised the school teachers of Utah to thus make use of the Book of Mormon in their schools. I, being at that time engaged in that high and responsible calling, adopted the advice, and can say, from the actual experience of several years, that the results were every way satisfactory. The children who read in the third, forth and fifth readers, read also, once a day, in the Book of Mormons and were required to so study their lessons as to be able to answer any historical, geographical or doctrinal question that might be suggested by it.

Lectures were occasionally delivered on the subject, both in the school and in a literary society that had been organized; and it was soon found that an interest had been awakened in the minds of the young people that led them to investigate, not only the book they had been reading, but many grand and glorious principles revealed in connection with it to the prophet Joseph Smith. Many of them began to realize for the first time that they were living in the days of prophets and apostles; that they were really connected with the Church of Christ; and that there was an individual work for them to do. They began to want to know more about the ancient inhabitants of America; their history, their faith, the causes of their overthrow and downfall; more about the great boy prophet of the nineteenth century, who found the record of that people as written on gold plates, and who translated it by the gift and power of God; more about the history of God's people, among whom are numbered their own parents and kindred; about their faith, their hopes and their aspirations.

The result of all this could, of course, be nothing but good. Even as no honest man or woman ever arose from a careful reading of the Book of Mormon without being impressed with its truthfulness, even as with children, their minds, though young and tender, are capable of understanding the sublime truths of that sacred book, and of grasping and comprehending the idea of its divine authenticity.

The fact is there is no book with which our children should be more familiar than the Book of Mormon. They cannot read it too young. There is no history extant that is so well authenticated. Every line of it was written by inspired men and it was translated by an inspired man. It is true and reliable as to history and as to doctrine from the first to the last page. This fact alone is enough to recommend it as a school book, but it is also very easy to read, there being very few long, hard words, excepting proper names, which fact adapts it to the requirements of the very young, who are just beginning to learn to read. Any child that can read in the second book of any of our popular series of Readers can read in the Book of Mormon.

Whenever it shall be considered expedient to banish from the schools of Utah the novel-tainted Readers of Babylon, which are sowing the seeds of infidelity widecast among our youth, and to substitute in their places the inspired productions of prophets and apostles, I shall hope to see the record of the ancient Nephites placed at the head of the list.

A LETTER TO THE PUBLIC!

Dear Reader:—Be not deceived by the flourishing statements of Daniel F. Beatty and others, who offer you pianos which they say are worth $800, for $300, and less; and organs worth $380, for $150; assigning as reasons for giving so large discounts—Beatty: "The offer is strictly confidential to dealers and to those who will introduce them in new localities." Others: "I have no taxes, rents, advertising or other expenses to pay." Now, this is all fraud and humbug, which must be apparent to you on reflection. The truth is that the instruments are not worth the money asked for them. They are dear at any price. Mr. Beatty is styled, in the Music Trade Review, as a swindler—"The most consummate fraud imaginable." "A most shameless fraud and barefaced falsifier," etc., etc. Read the issues from June, 1877, to Feb., 1878, for a full exposure of his venality—they can be seen at my store.

I most respectfully ask you not to purchase a piano or organ until you have examined my large stock and prices. I think it will be to your advantage to do so, because it will be found that I am selling better instruments at much less prices than any other person in the Territory. I say this advisedly. I am selling on monthly or quarterly payments, extending from one year to three years time. Send for particulars.

Your most obedient servant,
DAVID O. CALDER.
