

proposed by the secretary, replying to his Excellency's last note, to advise him of the position of this government. As it calls for no material change in Goldsborough's proposition, it is expected that his agreement will be easily obtained. In view of the fact that General Foster will be the agent and ex. Minister Clegg of Vermont leading the delegation on behalf of Wisconsin, it is probable that the delegation from Wisconsin will probably be also invited to act as counselor. The two attorneys on behalf of the United States are not yet chosen.

A Double Murder.

Omaha, March 30.—The morning's jury, in the supposed murder and suicide of A. N. Oliver of Marion, Iowa, returned a verdict of double murder. The identity of the supposed murderer was kept secret.

Dr. Edward H. Abbott, whose signature is in the newspaper with the prefix "Rev." to his other title, a recent mistake of that kind results a peculiar incident in which Dr. Eliot, Charles W., the president of Harvard university, was the victim. It was a meeting of Dr. Eliot, Abbott, and President Eliot had finished the reading of an essay. The meeting was about to end when the chairman announced, "The exercise will close with the benediction by Dr. Eliot."

The benedictus minister arose, bowed his head and waited, but no words of benediction were heard. Looking up, they saw Dr. Eliot seated with confusion, speaking earnestly with the chairman. The cause of the delay was not known, but the president's voice said, "Dr. Eliot must be ill." The reverend father, a deacon, came forward and said, "I am a deacon, and I will therefore do the benediction in presence of the benedictus."—Boston Journal.

A Patent Sewing Machine.

A sewing machine has been invented which sews successfully and rapidly through layers of leather, fine-sights of an inch in thickness, this having been accomplished on a first exhibition trial. In a second trial, there were made successfully and rapidly through layers of leather, fine-sights of an inch thick, in a test and still more remarkable that was achieved, viz., that of sewing through a layer of brass coinage of an inch thick placed between two pieces of leather.—New York Star.

Where Aborigines Are Hunted.

Though very numerous, aborigines are not generally regarded as dangerous in Paraguay. I have often seen the young negroes, Indian boys, who were a favorite sport of them; and the redskin, with his attention to their play. Cattle, too, waste about the flooded grass lands in search of pasture, and are rarely molested by aborigines. In fact, unless driven to bay or provoked with hunger, they dare not attack man or the larger animals, but they are always on the watch for smaller prey.—Barber's Itinerary in South America.

Giving our love letters.

Little Dot often doesn't like sleeping with her sister—When we get a new house I'm going to have a room to myself, and a key to the door.

Little Sister—Held it is due to have room to myself, but an extra key to do so—Good News.

The first mention of "rheumatism" was made by Herren in his account of the second voyage of Columbus, when he speaks of a bull used by the Indians made from the gins of a tree. This was lighter and tougher than any other than the famous warhorses of Castile.

The investigations recently made of the halibutacea which we know as the Columbia river fish have led scientific men to believe that they were occupied by a race of people fully 10,000 years ago.

The man of my acquaintance of 100 pounds has enough brain in his skull to make a philosopher and enough phosphorus to make a half million matches.

In the West Indies grows the silk cotton or Gossypium, the fruit of which is a very beautiful silken fiber, highly elastic and used for writing cases.

THE VERDICT.

A remarkable scene in Court when the Jury Assented to Decision.

The court house of Wilkes-Barre, Ark., was crowded to a full capacity yesterday morning, though every available street in the surrounding business blocks made it known that the jury in the case of the State of Arkansas versus Alice Bay were ready to return their verdict. What would it say? Did they believe the defendant, the murderer of John Price? And if they believed the old and the young, the boy and the girl, who had seemed to enter the courtroom with every look of eager expectation.

Outside the judgment was awaited with the idea, and every body longed and waited. The safety of day, was suspended by the suspense of the case, and those assembled gazed with bated breath, the sound of voices and the rustling of papers filling the air. At length the judge entered, all went into silence, and a wonderful regularity. "The Court," said a simple hammer-like repetition, was perfectly effective. The patient and quiet atmosphere, to which all minds were, especially young unmarried ladies, sensitive, was a complete contrast to the bustle and noise of the previous day.

A lag began with a groan, soon after putting the story of the crime to his plumbings, and then said that there was no witness but himself that the body found in the creek was that of the boy. The court now adjourned, and the judge, with his usual round of his black-bordered glasses.

The judge concluded the little platform at the end of the room and took the sheriff close an estimator of the jury. The struggling crowd was parted a little way, and twelve good and tactful minded men stood facing the press. They sat upon the floor of the gallery, and the judge, with his usual round of his black-bordered glasses.
