SALT LAKE CITY, JUNE 17, 1933.
WELCOME TO SENATOR CLARK.

It is quite proper that the business people of this city should provide a suitable reception to Senator W. A. Clark of Montana, as President of the railroad company that is to make direct connection between Salt Lake and Los Angeles. He is to be at the Commercial club tonight, where a banquet will be tendered him and he will meet the most prominent of our citizens, who regard the enterprise of which he is the head as of the utmost importance to this State.

The Salt Lake route, as the road from Los Angeles is called, is but one of the many great interests that have been promoted by Senator Clark, but it is of particular and special value to Utah. When it is built so as to connect with the line formerly owned by the O. S. L. and originally called the Utah Southern, the two cities—Los Angeles and Salt Lake—will be close neighbors, for distance is now almost annihilated by the forces that cause rapid transit and almost instantaneous association.

The benefit of such a union have been perceived for nearly half a century, and the ways and means to bring it about have been discussed by tongue and pen, but nothing practical came of the project until Senator Clark, influenced by live business men, particularly those in Los Angeles who favored it, took hold of the scheme and backed it by the great wealth at his command. He is always prompt and vigorous in his movements and they are notably attended with wonderful success. So the moment his name was authoritatively associated with the enterprise, it loomed up in solid form and was very soon acknowledged as having the elements of reality.

The Desert News was among the first of the public journals here to recognize the building of the road as something more than railway "hot air" or even a mere probability. We regarded it as genuine and so supported it, notwithstanding the pleasantry in which some of our contemporaries indulged concerning it. We also suggested the likelihood of the absorption by the new company of the line from this city south, as it seemed to us unlikely that parallel roads would be built for such a long distance. This idea was scouted at the time but it has now become a certainty. Most people like to indulge in "We told you so, and the news" has a claim on that expression in this instance at any rate.

It is gratifying to know that the Clark road, as it may be rightly called, is welcomed by all classes of this community, that it will soon be rushed to completion, and that it cannot fail to be of immense benefit to this region, as it will be to the cities on the coast and the country that the line will traverse. Doubt about it has been removed; what little opposition was manifested has melted away; and there appears to be nothing left to obstruct or hinder the completion of the work. Rejoicing over the situation is therefore warranted, and the reception and banquet to be given tonight will be a most appropriate recognition of the energy, liberality and sagacity of the gentleman who has made the enterprise possible.

A MONTH OF DISASTERS.

The month of June, this year, though barely half gone, bids fair to stand as a record-breaker for disastrous calamities. First came the Mississippi floods; then the death-dealing tornado at Gainesville, Georgia; that the destructive forest fires of New England and New York, and the floods in the "corn-mill belt" of South Carolina. The latest disaster is the cloud-burst by which the town of Heppner, Oregon, was wiped out, and hundreds of lives were lost. That is a terrible record for so short a time. And the calamities are about equally distributed in the various sections of the country. It is pleasing to know that the first reports of the Oregon disaster were exaggerated, and that the actual loss of life was much smaller than at first reported. Still, the disaster is appalling. It again illustrates the saying that no spot on earth is safe. No matter where man will go, he is in danger. If he escapes floods, he may be overtaken by earthquakes. If he builds out of reach of the tidal wave, he may be destroyed by other forces of nature, over which human power has no control. It would be well for the world to contemplate the "testimony" of the elements, that is being presented with such force at this time, and to interpret its meaning. Its lessons should not go unheeded.

REVIVAL OF GAELIC.

There is said to be a most remarkable revival of the Irish, or Gaelic language in Ireland. Only a few years ago the study of that interesting dialect was taken up by enthusiastic scholars, and now people of all classes of society have joined the movement, in order to aid, as they put it, in the development of an Irish Ireland. And so, the speaking of Irish has become fashionable, even in Dublin, where formerly that language was held in contempt.

It is said that the movement for the Gaelic has no more enthusiastic devotee than the Countess of Dudley, wife of the Lord Lieutenant. She now converses with the peasants of Roscommon, where she is spending a vacation, in their native tongue. She has led to the organization of competitions in Gaelic poetry, music, sports, customs, and has done much by example to encourage ancient Irish industries, such as poplin and lace manufactures. The ladies of the viceregal court, of course, have followed her example. The Earl of Dudley endorses the movement and hence the support by influential Irish peers as the Marquis of Waterford, Lord Mayo, Lord Dunsany, Lord Powlett and others.

An idea of the growth of the Gaelic league may be formed from the fact that, at the recent annual festival held in Dublin, there were represented no less than 256 branches of the league, and that the total of active branches is about 600. The festival lasted six days, and the program consisted of essays, stories, poems, competitive exhibitions between choirs and harpists, violinists and pipers. A play in native speech was also given, and there were lectures, concerts, etc. The reports read showed that during the past year there were fifty-two different publications printed in Gaelic, representing a total issue of about 253,000 copies, exclusive of a monthly magazine and weekly papers. Eighty paid organizers are employed teaching and organizing in the Irish-speaking districts. The native language is now taught in about 1,400 of the common schools, and in nearly all the religious and private schools. According to the census of 1901 the number of Gaelic-speaking persons in the island was 641,142.

A feature of the gathering which has attracted much attention was a lecture by a German scientist, on the subject of a school for Irish history, philology and literature. He said in part: "Here is the oldest vernacular poetry and prose of western Europe, handed down in hundreds of manuscripts, very few of which have been edited—many of which have hardly been opened for centuries—while the majority has only been hastily glanced over. What a task for generations of students! Who can say what revelations await us, what revolutions in our knowledge may be in store here?"

The professor further declared that such a school could not be created except in a national university which would have endowed chairs of philology, history and archaeology, and a well-equipped Irish library. There can be no doubt that the study of the old languages and dialects of Europe will more than repay the student. The literature that is still extant is sure to reveal much that now is hidden, in regard to the mythology, history, customs and habits of the early inhabitants of the islands and the continents.

ADVANCEMENT OF NEGROES.

At a recent session of the Conference for Education at Richmond, facts and figures concerning the material progress of the negroes in that southern capital were studied by President Ogden and other members of the conference. They had many facilities for obtaining information, and much of it is of general interest. It was found, for instance, that the city has a population of 52,738 whites and 22,259 colored. The report of the State Auditor for 1901 shows that the Richmond whites paid taxes on real property assessed at $40,044,000 and the negroes on an assessment of $24,000. These figures being below the actual value, it is a conservative statement that Richmond negroes who owned less than $30,000 of property when emancipated, have in thirty-eight years acquired real estate worth more than $1,000,000. In all Virginia whites own 24,931,351 acres and negroes 1,066,303 acres.

They further found that the negroes sustain 37 of the 121 churches of the city. As to schools, they are associated in twenty-six Baptist, five Methodist and two Episcopal churches, while there is one each of the Catholic, Apostolic, Presbyterian and Christian denominations. The value of colored church property is estimated at $25,000. Several church buildings cost more than $30,000 each. The colored preachers exert a strong influence. They are said to be all men of high character, and most of them are graduates of reputable schools. But there are some pastors whom the colored folk call "right powerful," who have enjoyed the benefit of little education in books. The churches are well attended.

According to official figures, the colored children also have a good record of attendance at the public schools. Of the white school population 90 percent and of the colored 95 percent are enrolled. The percentage of school population in daily attendance is: White, 39; colored, 46. The colored people there also have several banks. The Savings Bank of the Grand Fountain is said to have a full-paid capital stock of $100,000, and to carry over $500,000 of deposits. It was the first purely negro bank in the country. It began business when the failure of the Freedmen's Bank was fresh in the public mind. It is claimed that in the past of 1893 this was the only bank in Richmond that did not suspend specie payment. It was also the only bank that would advance cash to the Supervisor of Public Schools for the payment of over-due salaries. The advancement of the colored people in this country since the war, is truly remarkable. It is an indication of what can be done with that material in the course of time. It justifies the hope of men like Booker Washington, and it renders the unjust treatment of the race all the more unjustifiable.

CANNOT PROTEST.

Representatives of the Hebrew association in New York have seen President Roosevelt, in behalf of their oppressed brethren in Russia, and the President listened attentively to their representations. He also promised to do everything that could be done, without violating the principles of national comity. The Hebrew visitors were satisfied with this reply. No other result could, in fact, be expected.

Some days ago Count Cassini, under instructions from St. Petersburg, warned the United States that any note on the Kishineff massacre would be returned as offensive. He said the butchery was a purely local affair and no representations concerning it would be tolerated, even from the most friendly power. He added that "Russia had never considered that the lynching and burning of negroes in the United States, which were almost, if not quite, as horrible, were any of her business and that Russia now expected the same treatment from this country."

From the warning thus given to this country, that there will be no protests, and not even an inquiry. There is nothing further to do, if the government cannot consistently issue an invitation to an international congress on the Hebrew problem. If this is not desirable, the matter must rest where it is, until another massacre shocks the world.

Some surprise is expressed that Belgrade is not gay and lively, and wears no holiday aspect. It is surprising when it is remembered amid what gaiety and story the change of dynasty was made.

It is said that the Servian revolutionary leaders are as ready to kill King Peter as they were to murder King Alexander if he does not follow their aims. Truly "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown."

It is a strange sort of fisherman who says that on the day the season opened he only caught a score of fish, and that they weighed from a half to three-quarters of a pound each. He himself must be a queer fish.

"From the newspaper accounts succeeding the first published reports concerning the Kishineff catastrophe, I have concluded that the Jews themselves were the cause of the disorders, and that the Jews have been doubly repaid for their losses and injuries by their own brethren and others," says Father John Cronstadt of St. Petersburg. Of course the Jews were entirely responsible for the Kishineff massacres.

At the time of the Rock Springs massacre there was a reverend gentleman who published to the world that the Chinese set fire to their own houses and were responsible for their own destruction. Both instances are but an illustration of the wolf and the lamb muddling the water below him.

THE TRAGEDY IN SERBIA.

New York Evening Sun. The wholesale assassinations in Serbia make a fitting end to the sensational reign of the king. The little state has attracted more attention from the world than was natural, considering its size. The quarrels between Milan and his queen, the coup d'etat of Alexander, his marriage to a waiting lady, her effort to gain of a spurious heir on the country—all these things have made up a sensational romance. It was probably the last exploit that served the Karageorgievich pretender to strike. It is hardly likely that the last condition of the country will be better than the first. The new sovereign got a nice training on the boulevards of Paris. His tendency to epilepsy won't help him.

CHICAGO NEWS.

The reasons for the popular dissatisfaction with King Alexander, son of the infamous King Milan, are well known. He had abrogated constitutional rights, arrogating to himself despotic powers and minimizing those of the Servian parliament. His queen, Draga, daughter of a cattle dealer, and her relatives were highly offensive to the Servians. The public sentiment against the king last year stirred the partisans of Karageorgievich to fresh efforts to overthrow the reigning dynasty. At that time the officers of the Servian army were brought to lend their influence to the revolt. The fact that army officers conducted the recent assassinations indicates that the conspiracy was abetted by the military. It now remains to be seen what inspired them to act. There are hints of civil conflict within the Kingdom and of diplomatic intrigue on the part of Russia, to which nation the new king is very friendly.

San Francisco Chronicle. All of the European powers are at present evincing a disposition to allow Serbia to work out her own future. Intervention in her affairs on the part of any power will depend upon her own conduct. Her sudden and violent change of government will not disturb the continental peace. All of the great powers are interested in its preservation at the present time. Quiet seems to prevail throughout the kingdom, although a sensational report coming from Buda Pest through Berlin represents that to Alexander, who continues loyal to the cause, is marching on Belgrade with full war equipment and artillery. With Alexander dead, the purpose of such a move, if executed, is not clear. Another week will decide Serbia's immediate future. Whether it will insure permanent peace for her people is to be seen, for the Servian nation has proved in the past to be restless and unsettled.

NEW YORK EVENING POST.

The recent fantastic doings of the young King of Serbia had amused rather than excited the organs of public opinion in Europe, and did not prepare us for his tragic end. Serbia has a constitutional government modeled on that of France under the Second Empire, with a senate and a council of state in addition to the Skupstina, or national parliament. This constitution was adopted in 1901 at the instance of King Alexander, but he suspended it, on his own volition, a couple of months ago, long enough to get rid of the legislative body, which was disagreeable to him, and then put it in operation again. Now the first act of the new government is to proclaim the constitution in full force and to summon parliament.

KANSAS CITY TIMES.

Alexander, however, had been inclining toward a pro-Russian policy until a year ago when the Czar and Zarina refused to receive him and his bride at St. Petersburg. The slight made him turn toward Austria. The sudden change of dynasties is likely to prove favorable to Russia, as the Karageorgievich family has long been on friendly terms with the Czar. No serious disturbance is likely to result, however, from the new king's Russian affiliations. The balance of power in the Balkan peninsula is jealously guarded, and no encroachments by the St. Petersburg government are to be anticipated, at least for the present.

A CLEVER ILLUSTRATION WITH CONCLUSIVE PROOF.

There is an old formula in philosophy which says that no two things can occupy the same place at the same time. As a simple illustration, drive a nail into a board and you will find with every stroke of the hammer, the nail will force aside the particles of wood into which it is being driven, finally making a place for itself, and proving that the nail and the wood do not occupy the same place at the same time.

DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS AND BLADDER and Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cannot occupy the same place at the same time. If you are troubled with frequent pains in the back; if your urine stains linen; if you are forced to urinate frequently during the night, and a burning pain accompanies its passage, your kidneys and bladder are in bad shape and should be treated at once.

With every bottle of DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S FAVORITE REMEDY, taken according to directions, some of the particles of the dread diseases of the kidneys and bladder, liver, blood, rheumatism, dyspepsia and constipation of the bowels, are slowly, but surely, pushed aside until they completely disappear. Do not lose faith or find fault, if you are not entirely cured by one bottle, because if these diseases have fastened their grip on you the longer and harder it is to drive them away.
