SOME GOOD SHORT STORIES CULLED FROM EXCHANCES. $ar{b}_{ij}$

Gorman in New York.

Ex-United States Senator Arthur Poe Gorman, of Maryland, was in the corridor of the Fifth avenue hotel after breakfast the other morning when street gamin came up to him and said "Say, blokey, change a quarter for me, will you? Dem guys at the desk is too stuck up to do business wid me. The senator looked nonplussed as first, but gave the lad the change. To a n'st, dut save the late the change. To a friend standing with him he said: "What a shocking place to live in New York must be to a man of extreme egotism."—New York Times.

Sentiment and Thrift.

Ex-Congressman Cable of Illinois has a charming young daughter, who is receiving her education in France. When she was several years younger than she is now her father took her on his knew one day and said to her: "Today a man asked me if I would not sell little brother. He said he would give me a whole room full of gold. Shall I let him have little brother?" The child shook her head.

"But," persisted her father, "think how much money this room full of gold would be. Think how many things you could buy with it. Don't you think I'd better let the man have little broth-

"No," said the daughter; "let's keep him till he's older. He'll be worth more then."-New York Times.

Heard on Street Car.

Tired of being obliged to stand daily in the crowded trolleys, a business man called at the office of the company one day and expressed his sentiments in plain and vigorous terms.

"Who are you, that you come here and talk to us like that?" asked one of the officers of the corporation. "Are you a stockholder?" "No, sir!" he thundered. "I'm one of the strapholders!"-Youth's Companthe ion.

In a Prohibition State Too.

Here is a drouth story told by a traveling man: I was driving across the country to a little town in western Kansas the other day when I met a farmer hauling a wagon load of water. "Where do you get water?" said I. "Up the road about seven miles," he replied.

"And you haul water seven miles for your family and stock?"

Dog That Licked Lazarus.

The other day, when Counsellor Ed. Hassett, one of the sons of Steuben county. met Jack Switzer, of Bath, father of the American champagne industry, at the Fifth Avenue hotel, he told him that a friend of his had a new dog, "It's a fighting dog." added the counsellor, "and he wants an appro-priate name for it."

Tell him to call it Moreover," said Jack. "Moreover," exclaimed the counsellor, perp'exed. "Yes," replied Switzer, "Moreover, after the first fighting dog on record." "Never heard of him," declared the counsellor.

'Go read your bible, then," said Switzer, "and see where it says that 'Moreover the dog came and licked Lazarus.' I don't know what breed Moreover was, but he must have been a fighting dog or he wouldn't have licked Lazarus."-New York Tribune.

Legal Anecdote.

A lawyer of some distinction who began practice in a small New England town, says his first client required : deed covering certain parcels of land sold to a neighbor. The deed was drawn in due form, and after its exe-cution the client demanded his bill. It WES $2. This amount was objected to as a most exorbitant sum for the serice rendered.

Chicago Man's Sneech.

The president was lited by a dele-gation of Chicago isachess men, wh had come to Washington to ask him i recommend in his message to Congres-the establishment of a new executiv department of the government, to be department of the government, to be presided over by a secretary of com-merce. As it is well known that the president heartily favors this proposition, and has determined to urge it up on Congress, those who know him bes realize that he does not want his tim. taken up in further consideration of it But the Chicago men had selected a spokesman, who had prepared a per-suasive oration, and when they were Recently she had asked him on several occasions to send home a bag of potatoes-with the usual results apologies and ex-cuses on his return home for his forgetfulness. The other morning, before he left home, Mrs. M. gave nim a scaled letter, with the request that he should promise not to open it till he had reach-ed his place of business. Her husband ondered at this, but in answer to all its inquiries she repeated the request o carnestly that at last he consented. All the way in on the car he thought of his wife's strange request, and he had hardly entered his place of business hen he tore open the letter. This is that he read;

Gen. Ballington Booth of the Volunteers of America told a story at the an-nual meeting of his organization last week of a Methodist prayer meeting hel on the East Side during the mayoralty campaign. In the midst of a prayer, he related, one pious brother said:

"Oh, Lord, we pray Thee that the Democratic party may hang together in the coming election.'

"Amen, answer prayer, Lord," put in a Republican who was near. "But I do not mean it as the Repub-lican brother means it, Lord. I pray that we may hang together in concord and accord." continued the Democrat "Amen, Lord," again said the Repub-lican. "Any cord. so long as they hang."-New York Times.

The bridge builder with Stonewall Jackson's army was a rare character, if the following story be true: The Union soldiers, retreating from the valley of Virginia, burned a bridge over the Shenandoah.

Jackson, who wanted to pursue, sent for his old bridge builder. "Sir," he said "you must keep men at work all day and all night, and finish that bridge tomororw morning. My engineer shall give you a plan." Old Miles saluted and withdrew.

Early the next morning the general sent for Miles again. "Well, sir," said Jackson, "did the engineer give you the plan for the bridge?" "General," said the old man, slowly, "the bridge is done: I don't know whether the picture is or not."

One on Ingersoll.

Senator Mark Hanna, when it came his turn for a story not long ago in the Waldorf-Astor, told the following: "When Robert G. Ingersoll came to Washington from the West, his head filled with legal lore and infidelity, or it would be better to call it agnosticism. he encountered in one of the corridors of the capitol an old negro woman vigorously scrubbing the floor, when she heard anyone coming, and, when the foooisteps died away, busily reading the Bible.

"He slipped up on her very quietly one morning, and, taking her by sur-prise with her precious book, said: "'Mary, do you believe all you read there?

"Honor Among Thieves."

Ex-Governor "Jim" Hogg of Texas is in town on his annual fall visit to the city. The governor has been successful in business the past year, but never misses the opportunity to tell one of those hard luck stories of his early ca-reer, which, given with such genuine feeling, always deeply impresses his au-ditors. His latest is that of the early days when Mr. Hogg had commenced the practice of law in his Texan home. He was decidedly hard up for a board bill amounting to $50, and was on the limits of landlady leniency. Stiting in his office one day wondering how he could raise the needed sum, a man entered and informed him he wished legal advice. "Fifty dollars, sir," exclaimed Mr.

Hogg almost involuntarily as he saw visions of a financial windfall.

"Oh, you want your fee in advance? All right, sir," and the client took a roll of bills from his pocket and handed him a $50 bill.

The visitor then announced that he vate banking house.

Mr. Hogg, while considering his duty to his client, also was mindful of that as a good citizen, and gently but

"Mr. President, we have come—" "To see you about the establishment sea. of a department of commerce," whis-pered one of the delegates into the President's ear. "Well, well," fairly screamed the president, half petulantly and half good naturedly. "I am glad to learn that Chicago favors that proposition. I do, too; so there's nothing for us to talk about on that score. Delighted to meet you. Come again." And with this the President gave his visitors plainly to understand that the interview was at an end. The orator, however, stood his ground courageously, for when the President snapped out his final word, he started again at the beginning of his speech and was restrained from delivering the whole oration only by his companions p!bearing him along in their movement out of the door.

But the oration wasn't wasted, for it was telegraphed out to the Chicago pa-pers that night for home consumption North American.

Sam Jones' Advice.

Sam Jones, in one of his sermons, took women to task for spending more time in prinking than in praying. "If there's a woman here," he screamed finally "who prays more than she prinks, let her stand up."

One poor old faded specimen of femininity, in the sorriest, shabblest of lothes, arose.

"You spend more time praying than prinking," asked the preacher, taking er all in. The poor old creature said she did-prayed all the time, prinked not at all, "You go straight home," admonished Jones, "and put a little time in ou prinking.

He Was Not Popular.

An officer in one of the English voluneer regiments who had made himself exceedingly unpopular with the men-was coming home one evening when he slipped and fell into deep water. He was rescued with great difficulty by a private in his own regiment. The officer was profuse in his expressions of gratitude and asked his preserver how he could reward him.

"The best way," said the soldier, "is to say nothing about it." "But why?" asked the officer in anazement. "Because," was the blunt reply, 'if the other fellows knew I'd pulled you out they'd chuck me in."--Youth's Companlon.
