

HALL HAS A PLAN ON SAVING MONEY

Resolution Proposes to Assess Corner Property Owners For Improvement.

AUTHORITY IN STATE LAWS

Under Present System the City Pays For Intersections and Attendant Construction—Tyler Loses Job.

To assess the entire cost of grading, filling, culverting and otherwise improving, repaving or repairing streets at their intersections against the surrounding and abutting property, is the purpose of a resolution introduced into the city council last evening by Councilman L. E. Hall, of the Fourth precinct.

The resolution, as originally drafted, provided also for the curbing and guttering of the street intersections at the expense of the property owners, but after some debate the words curbing and guttering were stricken out. The resolution, which is based upon section 276, chapter 13, revised statutes of Utah, which gives the council the option of paying half the cost of the grading for sidewalk or street paving and bearing the entire expense for the intersections, or of assessing the entire cost against the abutting property, is calculated to save the city much money, and make the owners of corner lots feel that their property is a great deal more valuable, or at least more expensive, than it formerly was. The matter went over a week for the purpose of allowing the city attorney to investigate the constitutionality of the proposed resolution.

THE RESOLUTION.

The resolution, as amended, is as follows: Resolved, That hereafter the city engineer be authorized and instructed to make a plan for the grading, filling, culverting, or repairing sidewalks and intersections in the levy against the abutting property.

Owing to the large number of protests against the Utah Light & Heat company erecting its poles inside the curb on the north side of East Second street, the company was instructed to cease erecting poles altogether until the matter is adjusted. Councilman Black wanted to give another hearing to Patrolman J. T. Tyler, who resigned some weeks ago on being taken in conduct unbecoming a policeman, but which was not acted on until after election. The police and prison committee recommended that the resignation be indorsed, and Mr. Black's motion was lost, 8 to 1.

WANTS A NEW BRIDGE.

The petition of Addison Cain that a bridge be built across the canal at First West and Tenth South streets was referred to the city engineer for an estimate of cost. Petitioner says he will furnish the labor if the city will furnish the materials. The petition of Brigham Young associated with that of maintaining the lawn around the grave of President Brigham Young be by the city was on motion laid over for another week.

COUNCIL COMMITTEES MEET.

Members Want to Know Why Intersecting Sewer Is Not Complete.

After the conclusion of the adjourned session of the city council last night, the committees held their regular sessions. The committee on streets took up the matter of the liability of the Utah Light & Heat company for damages in the matter of the collision between a street car and a street flushing wagon at the corner of Second East and Second South streets on Sept. 19, in which the flushing wagon was damaged in the sum of about $150. The committee finally decided the street car company was to blame for the collision, and a settlement will be insisted upon in the recommendation made to the city council.

BANK CLERKS DINE.

Nearly 100 bank clerks and officials, members of the local chapter of the American Institute of Banking, held a successful smoker at the Commercial club last evening, in which a toothsome spread was an enjoyable feature. Cashier Badger of the Utah National bank made an interesting address in which he pointed out the advantages of membership in the institute for the exchange of ideas, and co-operation in lines of banking activities which could help but result in good to the members. The constitution and by-laws were adopted and these committees appointed: Amusement committee, Walter Johnson of Walker Bros. bank, chairman; program committee, J. B. Kelly of the Utah National bank, chairman; reception committee, Joseph Buzzo of Walker Bros. bank, chairman; membership committee, John Bloem of the Utah State bank, chairman. These committees will prepare an extensive program for entertainment of members and arrangement of lectures by prominent bankers from all over the country. The next meeting will be held Nov. 25.

HOMESEEKERS TO TRAVEL WESTWARD

The Exposition Will Draw Them And Urge Them to Stay.

PLANTING GARDENS OF ROSES

Alaska-Yukon Affair Will Eclipse Other Similar Projects and Will Help Populate the West.

That another year will see the State of Washington and the whole north-west fixed upon their map more firmly than ever before through the reawakening of the stream of tourist travel that poured into Portland in 1905, is the declaration of a young resident of Seattle, Earl J. Hadley, who passed through Salt Lake last night on his way to New York.

Mr. Hadley is a graduate of Stanford university and a son of H. E. Hadley, chief justice of the supreme court of Washington state. His brother, Roy O. Hadley, is secretary of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, which is at present using its resource at its command in an effort to direct westward next season the largest stream of tourists that ever headed in this direction.

The attraction to be offered them is the Alaska-Yukon exposition, which Mr. Hadley says will be shaped into form before June 1, 1909, so that it will be as completely as possible set forth the reasons why the tourists who come should not go away again.

"It is to Salt Lake's interests," said Mr. Hadley, "to see that the north-west country fills up with people. They are in your zone of trade. More than that, the coast town now gather the people who come to the western shores by water, and will until the country is reasonably full. The cities just east of the Rockies, such as Denver and Colorado Springs try to hold all they possibly can of those coming west. This intermountain country, between the first of two competing localities will fill up only after the others reach their capacity."

THE SALT LAKE CHANGE.

"Then Salt Lake will get her chance, and I think that no previous opportunity has been so good as that afforded by our exposition next year to attract the stream of eastern people westward, that the west needs to get her resources properly known."

"Seattle city as a metropolis is a creation of the Alaskan gold fever, aided recently by the shift of the balance of trade northward from San Francisco, and supported always by the inland agricultural resources on both sides of the boundary line. The whole northwest is pulling in behind the fair in great shape, realizing that it offers an opportunity for which they have long been waiting, and that for every 10 people coming west one is sure to like some locality en route, no one knows just what one of the various offerings they may look over, and wish to remain there."

When asked about the present state of the work towards the Seattle exposition's completion, Mr. Hadley said that three of the permanent buildings, which are to go to the University of Washington at the close of the fair, are finished, and a fourth is nearing completion. The manufacturers and agricultural building is completed, and it is to be the principal building of the fair, in which the resources of the entire west will be attractively set up for the inspection of eastern visitors.

SISTER STATES HELPING.

"Outside of our Washington state activities, Oregon has kindly come forward with a keen interest and has already completed the Oregon state building, in which the Oregon exhibit is now being placed for storage over winter. California too has been quick to give her friendship and support in the practical form of a California building, to be completed Jan. 1, now well along in its progress."

Of the effect of the exposition upon the city itself, Mr. Hadley enthusiastically declared it had done wonders in awakening the people to a sense of the necessity of all pulling together to work for the great fair. "Why they have put in miles of sewers," he said, "and hundreds of thousands of bushes, just to make the visitors glad to look at our vistas. The exposition management too has over 1,000,000 plants, mostly rose bushes, ready to set out on the exposition grounds. They have been in green houses for two years getting their growth, and all are expected to be flowering during the fair. Alone they will make a feature only possible in the moist climate of the western coast, and are sure to win with the east."

The people of the coast feel jubilant over Salt Lake's securing the G. A. R. convention, and expect many of its visitors to go on to the fair. Mr. Hadley while here was a guest of Joel L. Nibley, a Stanford classmate.
