

SIR HENRY CALMED.

Gallery Gofa Advises Him When Ghost Quits Stage.

Once Sir Henry Irving, while playing "Macbeth" in London, was somewhat disconcerted by one of the "gallery gods." He had reached the point where Macbeth orders Banquo's ghost to have the banquet board. "Hence, horrible shadow, unreal mockery, hence!" exclaimed Irving in his most tragic tones, and with a convulsive shudder, sank to the ground, drawing his robe about his face. Just as Banquo withdrew, an agitated coughing voice from high up in the gallery piped out as if in reassurance: "It's all right now, 'Energy'—it's gone!"

A SHOTKEEPER'S REPARTEE.

A country gentleman, whose wife was of a very proud and overbearing disposition, was thinking of standing for a seat at Westminster. So, to win popular favor, he gave a garden party to which every voter for miles around was invited.

Among the humble guests was a very independent grocer, who made himself quite at home, and so much so that his lack of humility angered his hostess exceedingly. In the end, thinking to "teach him his manners," she said to him, significantly: "You know, Mr. Green, in London, shopkeepers don't go into the best society."

The grocer looked at her and smiled.

"They don't here, either, ma'am," he said quietly.
