CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of railroad transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between the cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and direct route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and correspondingly to points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Atkinson, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, Elegant Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten, "good Digestion waiting on Appetite, and Health on both." Between Chicago and Kansas City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul. Close connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and the British Provinces. Over this route, Fast Express Trains are run to the widely known places, summer resorts, picturesque localities, and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. It is also the most desirable route to the rich wheat fields and pastoral lands of interior Dakota.

Still another DIRECT LINE, via Seneca and Kankakee, has been opened between Newport News, Richmond, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, and Lafayette and Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul and intermediate points.

SEVIER STAKE CONFERENCE

Sevier Stake Conference convened on Saturday, August 21, at 10 a. m. It was conducted by Councillors A. K. Thurber and Wm. H. Seegmiller. Harmony and good will prevailed. Excellent music was furnished by the choir led by Elder Oke Salisbury. Aged brethren of over 30 or 40 years standing in the Church bore testimony with renewed energy and satisfaction. No communion. Toast to them was impossible at any price. There were given exhortations to humility, charity, fidelity, and unsullied allegiance to the Government of God, as given and restored by the everlasting priesthood. the necessity for boldness in its proper quality and place, was advocated. Unity, religious and political, was urged.

Such was the nature of the instructions given by the presidents and speakers. An unusually powerful address was delivered on Sunday afternoon by Elder George Crane, of Millard Stake. The usual quarterly High Priests meeting was held on Saturday evening. Authorities general and local were unitedly sustained. Cash collected for Manti Temple $194.25.

SARAH IN ARMS.

WHY AND HOW SHE WHIPPED MME. NOIRMONT.

Everybody in Paris is gossiping at present about the Bernhardt-Noirmont scandal in Rio Janeiro, says a New York World correspondent. There are various versions of the affair, but two points are clear from the mass of correspondence on the incident—that Sarah found it necessary to horsewhip one of her artistes, and that she denounced in language more expressive than polite, the Brazilian magistrate for refusing to consign Mme. Noirmont to a dungeon without trial or hearing.

Mme. Noirmont was a member of Sarah's troupe and engaged at the rather slender salary of $100 a month. She had never played in public previous to this engagement, and was better known in Paris for her remarkable beauty than for her dramatic qualities. While performing in the theatre of San Pedro d'Alcantara, Rio, she found her role too fatiguing, and resolved to leave the company. On the morning of the 20th ult., Mme. Bernhardt on entering the theatre, found Mme. Noirmont engaged in packing her trunks. Sarah upbraided her for her "treason," in thus deserting her in a strange country, and Noirmont replied in language that the Paris journals could not print. Two days afterward Mme. Noirmont was stopped on leaving the theatre by one of the employes of the company, who informed her that he could not allow anything to be taken out without an order from his superiors. Mme. Noirmont reentered the theatre with the porter and asked him who had issued such an order. Sarah Bernhardt, who was standing on the peristyle, with Garnier, the director of the company, and several artists, stepped forward and declared that she had given the order; "because she Mme. Noirmont, had stowed away in her trunks, things which did not belong to her." Mme. Noirmont replied to this accusation by slapping Sarah's cheeks. The other artists immediately rushed in, secured Mme. Noirmont and led her to the police station and then to the sub-delegado. For an hour the judge listened to the accusations and explanations of both parties, and to the depositions of the witnesses. The judge, then, through an interpreter, requested Sargh, who was vehemently denouncing everybody, to wait an instant in order to attach her signature to the document he was drawing up, when the great artiste leaned forward and shrieked in his ear: "You are only an old fool, an old imbecile, and I will have no more to do with you."

Mme. Noirmont was dismissed on bail of $1,000. That night she was to appear in her role in "Adrienne Lecouvreur." The scandal had meantime spread throughout the city, and the theatre was crowded with an expectant audience. Sarah acted superbly, though at times, it is said, she appeared convulsed with anger, and whenever she caught a glimpse of Noirmont, her eyes shot fire. On the fall of the curtain Sarah started precipitately for her loge, but unhappily, as she stepped into the coulisse, she met her hated enemy face to face. "Que faites vous ici?" shrieked the "divine Sarah." "Je ne veux pas chien."

This polite sentence was interrupted by Noirmont, who aimed a slap at Bernhardt's face. Meantime, M. Garnier and Maurice Bernhardt seized Mme. Noirmont and held her arms pinioned, while Sarah, who had procured a whip, administered seven or eight stinging lashes on her enemy's face, each one leaving an ugly red mark. Mme. Noirmont rushed out of the theatre screaming with rage and pain and hurried toward her hotel.

On reaching the Rua de Teatro, she was met by Maurice Bernhardt and his cousin, who grossly insulted her in presence of a large throng of people. This last act of aggression aroused general indignation, and was denounced by the editor of a Rio journal, who chanced to be a witness of the scene. Young Bernhardt sent the editor a challenge to mortal combat, next morning, and the editor replied by sending a pair of rattle-boxes to the two beardless braves.

The day after the horse-whipping incident Mme. Noirmont lodged a complaint against Mme. Bernhardt and her friends for assault and for contempt of court.

Meantime, M. Garnier served notice on Mme. Noirmont to appear at the theatre and sign the annulment of her contract. This Mme. Noirmont refused to do; but, as she had some personal business to attend to in the theatre she went there, accompanied by two policemen for her protection. Sarah and her companions were served with summonses to appear in court, and both artistes chose their lawyers for the trial.

The affair created a great sensation among all classes of society in Rio, and everybody took sides. The entire staff of the Italia—an Italian journal published in Rio—issued a notice declaring that if Mme. Noirmont could not find a defender among her own companions or among the aristocracy of Rio, "that she could come at any hour and choose a defender from among the staff of the Italia."

It appears from a recent dispatch from Rio that the affair was settled without legal proceedings. At all events, Sarah escaped imprisonment, as she is now in Buenos Ayres, performing with extraordinary eclat and success. Her Rio scandal only adds a piquancy to her other attractions, and, as appears from the benefit accorded her in that city on the 9th inst., before leaving, only heightened her popularity. A hundred students came down from San Paulo, to present the great artiste with an album and numberless floral tributes, and all the schools of Rio turned out to do her honor. There were, says a Rio dispatch, orations and poems and congratulations illimitable and inimitable, and Sarah was called everything sweet, good and great that the crazy poets could imagine.

Even poor old Emperor Dom Pedro lost his mental equilibrium in the delirium of general rejoicing, and sent for Sarah and presented her with a costly bracelet set in brilliants. The series of honors was crowned by a high society journal, the æsthetic Semana, issuing a special edition containing Sarah's praises, printed on silk and inclosed in rich covers of plush.

An Extraordinary Table.

The North-western Lancet gives space to a remarkable story taken from L'Universe, of Feb. 28, relating to an attempt made to secure for the exhibition of the Franklin institute of Philadelphia a most remarkable table at present in the Pitti palace in Florence. Of this table L'Universe says: "It was made by Guiseppe Sagatti, who spent many years in finishing it. So far as one can see, it seems to be a curious work of marble of various hues, for it looks like polished stone, and yet it is composed only of the muscles, hearts, and intestines of human bodies. One hundred cadavers were required to make it.

"The table is round, one meter in diameter, with a pedestal and four clawed feet, the whole made of petrified human flesh. The author of this work died fifty years ago. After having passed through the hands of three owners, the last of whom committed suicide and sprinkled the table with his blood, it reached the Pitti palace.

"Sagatti succeeded in solidifying the bodies by plunging them into many mineral baths. He obtained the cadavers from a hospital. The intestines serve for ornaments of the pedestal; the claws are made of hearts, livers, and lungs, and preserve the colors of those tissues. The table is made of muscles artistically arranged; around it are a hundred eyes and ears, which produce the most strange effect. The eyes, it is said, seem to be alive, and they look at you at whatever point you place yourself. This was the most difficult work of the artist. He was satisfied with his achievement and communicated his methods to scientists.

"The last owner of this table, Giacomo Rittaboca, had placed it in the center of his salon, and took pleasure in showing it to guests, saying that it was the work of an original sculptor; then in the evening he would explain its real origin. One Christmas night he had gathered together some friends, and they were playing cards on this table. Rittaboca lost, and the eyes of the table fascinated him; he became pale, agitated; at last he rose and walked about with hurried steps, then came and sat down again and lost still, disconcerted by the fixity of the looks which followed him. It was proposed to change their place, and the importunate eyes were covered over. 'It is useless,' said he, and he told his friends the whole story of the table made up of parts of human bodies. 'It is not marble,' said he, 'it is flesh, real eyes, real muscles, real hearts. See! they are still alive. The eyes speak to you. I cannot endure them, they make me mad.' Then suddenly he seized a dagger, and before any one had time to stop his arm he had stabbed himself to the heart, exclaiming to his friends: 'I am rid of them.' His blood poured over the table and his corpse rolled to the floor. His heirs were glad to sell the piece of furniture to the government, and if the guardian of the Pitti palace is willing to lend it to the exposition, Americans who are fond of strong emotions may be satisfied."—L'Union Medicale.

He Defied the Deity.

A gentleman residing in Middletown, who was visiting in Sullivan county last week, was attracted by eight headstones in a little grass-grown cemetery near Fallsburg, all of which stood in a row and were exactly alike. He got out of his wagon to look at them, and found that they were all children of a well-known physician, and that all were grown when stricken down, and that the dates on the headstones showed that the first died Nov. 23, 1861, and the other seven between that date and Dec. 15 following, or that the entire family of eight children had died within eight weeks.

When speaking of the matter to friends that day he was told the history of the case, which is regarded in that neighborhood as a visitation of Providence in punishment for defiance of the Diety.

The story as told is that in 1861 there was a scourge of diphtheria in that neighborhood, and the physician was kept busy treating patients suffering from that disease. He was very successful, and gained such confidence in his skill that he began to boast that he "defied God Almighty to produce a case of diphtheria he could not cure." In less than a week his youngest child was seized with the disease, and although he exercised his skill to the utmost, having not only professional pride but a father's love to urge him to do his best, his boy grew worse and died. One after another his children sickened and died, until all were laid side by side in the little graveyard near Fallsburgh. But one child was left, a married daughter, but in a few weeks she, too, was stricken down and became a victim to the dread disease.—Middletown (N. Y.) Argus.
