-----A LEGAL PROBLEM.

THE municipal government of this city now stands face to face with the question of paving the streets, or the sidewalks, which are part of the streets. It is one of the gravest questions Asancially which city governments are called upon to deal with, always involving heavy expense, and a consequent increase of the burdens of the taxpayer. But it may be doubted if the floancial feature of this question. as now presented to the government of this particular city, is its most difficult one to cope with. There are certain principles of organic law involved which require to be distinctly ascertained and conformed to, otherwise litigation, confusion and much serious trouble may ensue.
