CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 7.—Booth, from the committee on public lands, reported, with amendments, the Senate bill relating to the indemnity school selection in the State of California; placed on the calendar

Windom, from the committee on public lands, reported favorably on the House bill to amend the act of Dec. 28th, 1874, for the relief of certain settlers on public lands; passed. It extends the provisions of the act mentioned, for one year, so as not to deprive homestead settlers who were driven from their homes by the locust plague of their rights.

The resolution proposing a common unit of money and account for the United States and Great Britain, which was discussed last Monday, was called up and passed.

Kelly called up the Senate bill for the relief of the sureties of J. W. P. Huntington, deceased, late superintendent of Indian affairs in Oregon; passed.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the legislative, judicial and executive appropriation bill, the pending question being on the motion of Edmunds to recommit the bill to the committee on appropriations; it was withdrawn. The question then being on the amendment, submitted by Edmunds, providing that all appointments in the departments of Government shall be upon a careful and impartial examination of the candidate by a board.

Howe opposed, as did also Christiancy and Eaton, and it was rejected, 11 against 28.

The question was then on Clayton's amendment, that the appointments in all the Executive Departments of the government shall be so arranged as to be equally divided between the several States of the United States and Territories and District of Columbia, according to the populations and the principal of equal distribution of the appointments as above provided for shall apply in making reductions of the force in said departments. The amendment was subsequently amended, by giving honorably discharged soldiers and sailors the preference for appointments. The vote on this being nearly unanimous.

At length Clayton's amendment as amended, was rejected, 22 against 23. The Californian senators voted with the majority.

Clayton submitted the following: Provided that, in making the reduction of the force, the heads of the departments shall retain those persons who may be qualified and who may have become disabled in the military or naval service of the United States, and widows of deceased soldiers. Agreed to unanimously.

The amendments proposed by Howe, for increasing the appropriation for tools and improvements of the botanical garden, from $3,000 to $5,000, and a like appropriation for the purchase of books for the library of Congress, from $5,000 to $9,000; agreed to. Also the amendment appropriating $2,500 instead of $1,500 for newspapers and periodicals for the library. Various amendments of an unimportant character were proposed by the committee on appropriations and agreed to. The bill was then reported to the Senate and passed, 33 against 7.

The fortification appropriation bill then came up, and it was passed without amendment.

The silver bill was then taken up in order to have it as unfinished business to-morrow.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 7.—The house bill, repealing the section of the Revised Statutes making restrictions in the disposal of public lands in the Southern States, was passed by 106 against 97.

Wood, from the committee of ways and means, submitted a unanimous report of that committee in regard to the Alaska Commercial Company. The report recites that the committee has made a full investigation into the law and facts relating to the granting of the lease to the Alaska Commercial Company for the right to take seals on the islands of St. Paul and St. George and that the lease was made in accordance with the act approved July 1st, 1870, and has been complied with on the part of the lessees, and that it is for the advantage of the United States, and declaring it to be the opinion of the House that there was no ground of complaint against the Alaska Commercial Company or against the officers of the Government who were instructed to make the lease and to see it enforced; and that they are entitled to the enjoyment of the franchise so long as said company complies with the requirements of the law under which it holds its rights. The report was agreed to without discussion.

The House then proceeded to the consideration of the bill for the distribution of the unappropriated moneys of the Geneva award, and was addressed by Lord, who had reported it from the judiciary committee.

Knott spoke in opposition.

EASTERN.

That Telegram—Blaine and Knott.

WASHINGTON, 7.—The following is the copy of a telegram received by Knott on Thursday, and which he has furnished for publication—

"London.

"To the Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Washington:

"I have just read in the New York papers Scott's evidence about our bond transaction, and I can fully corroborate it. I never gave Mr. Blaine any Fort Smith railway bonds, directly or indirectly.

"I have three foreign railway contracts on my hands, which make it impossible for me to leave without great pecuniary loss, or I would gladly voluntarily come home, and so testify. I can make affidavit to this effect and mail it if desired.

(Signed) "JOSIAH CALDWELL."

The scene between Knott and Blaine to-day in the room of the judiciary committee was at times of the most exciting character, especially on the part of the questions asked by Blaine, which Knott supposed impugned his honor.

After the sub-committee adjourned, Knott, approaching Frye, a member of the committee, and who has been in attendance as an advisory friend of Blaine's, said to him, "Mr. Frye, your friend Blaine is the God da-em est scoundrel in America."

This remark, or its equivalent, having already found its way into print, it should be added, that Frye replied, "You forget yourself, Mr. Knott." "Yes," said Knott, "I do," and thereupon he immediately withdrew the remarks and apologized for having made them.

Blaine made a speech saying that the Luttrell resolution lay dead and dormant for ninety-two days, until the Tarbox resolution was passed. He asked Mr. Frye upon the passage of the Tarbox resolution to go and ask Knott to put northern democrats and not southern rebels on the sub-committee.

I want Mr. Knott, he cried, with a dramatic flourish, to tell me why, if that Luttrell resolution was so important, nothing was done under it for three months.

Here Blaine raised his voice, and demanded peremptorily of Hunton, whether he would now inform him, as he had promised to do in the House, whether he knew of the reception of that cable dispatch from Caldwell by Knott.

Knott replied that the sub-committee was far too busy to do anything about the matters referred to it, under the Luttrell resolution, during those three months.

Knott was then closely cross-examined by Blaine, on the subject of the cable dispatch. I want to know, Blaine shouted, whether you intend to produce that dispatch before the House?

Knott—I never had any other intention than to produce it before the judiciary committee.

Mr. Blaine—During these five days that you had it, have you not denied to newspaper men that you had it?

Knott protested against being interrupted, and went on to make about the same explanation he made before. He had never sent a cable dispatch in his life and did not know that the cable company kept the address of the sender. Since he thought he had no means of testing the genuineness of the dispatch by telegraphing back to Caldwell, he went on to say that he informed Lord, McMahon, Jenks and Lynde of it; and as to his not giving it to the press, why if the dispatch had said Blaine got the bonds, he would not have given it to the press before verifying it.

Blaine coolly intimated that he thought he would.

Knott—(walking up menacingly to Blaine)—"What, do you mean to insinuate that I should do you that injustice?"

Blaine said, Yes; you would not have kept back long any testimony of a damaging character.

Knott went on to explain, when Blaine interrupted him, saying, I know that in the case of the Cheesebrough dispatches.

Hunton reproved Blaine and said he must not interrupt.

Knott protested that he intended to lay the dispatch before the committee.

Blaine—When?

Knott—I did not find any time.

Blaine—Was it not suppression not to give it to the press?

Whereupon Knott defended himself as well as he could.

Blaine—Well, you are a lawyer, I suppose. You must be, as you are the chairman of the judiciary committee. If you received the dispatch from Caldwell, what is the presumption, that it came from Caldwell or that it did not? (Laughter.)

Knott—That depends on circumstances.

Blaine then cross-examined Knott on the manner in which the judiciary committee intended to deal with the dispatch and on the time they intended to publish it.

Knott declared that he proposed to do business in his own way.

Blaine—You say the cable dispatch was no evidence. Will the affidavit that Caldwell proposed to send be no evidence?

Knott—An ex parte affidavit taken in London, would not be.

The scramble continued, and Blaine, waxing wroth, wanted to know, (in a voice trembling with rage) whether Knott meant to insinuate that he (Blaine) had been in communication with Caldwell, to make him send that dispatch. Here a personal encounter was impending, but Knott disavowed such intimation.

Blaine—Because I have heard that you have been rumaging the telegraph office to find a dispatch from me to Caldwell.

Knott—(Furiously) Then you have heard a lie.

Blaine—Well, I want the country to know that for all those days Lord, McMahon, Jenks and Lynde knew of this dispatch and never gave it to the world.

The scene was very exciting, and it was generally expected that Blaine and Knott would come to fisticuffs, but luckily, Hunton and Lynde interrupted them with long statements, during which the combatants had time to cool down.

Blaine then returned to the charge, saying that Knott had never done anything to ascertain whether the dispatch was genuine or not.

Knott—that is not true.

Lynde—If that dispatch was spurious it would be no test to telegraph back to London.

Blaine—Every American registers at the cable office, and if you had telegraphed back to inquire whether the sender was Josiah Caldwell or not, you could have obtained the whole police of London to look up this matter in six hours.

The examination by Blaine of the whole judiciary committee went on in the same strain, until that committee adjourned, as he disclaimed all knowledge of the dispatch because he said it involved the honor of the committee. Blaine especially required correspondents to send this examination of the committee in full. "Lets have that out," he exclaimed jubilantly.

Robeson did not Interfere.

Commodore Shufeldt, Chief of the Bureau of equipment and recruiting, testified before the committee on naval affairs to-day, that Secretary Robeson never interfered in any manner with purchases or prices, or men who should be favored, directly or indirectly.

Act Signed By the President—Umatilla Reservation—Receipts of Government.

The President to-day signed the act granting a site for an observatory to the trustees of the Lick Observatory of the Astronomical Department of the University of California.

A majority of the Senate committee on Indian affairs, to-day, reported adversely on Mitchell's bill for the sale of the Umatilla reservation in Oregon; but Mitchell succeeded in getting it recommitted for further consideration, and is sanguine of an ultimate favorable report.

The receipts of the Government for the fiscal year ending with June, estimate, from customs $146,027,536. Internal revenue $116,048,507. Miscellaneous $23,108,534. Expenditures $263,138,853. The receipts show a decrease from the estimates from customs of over ten millions; internal revenue over four millions; and an increase in miscellaneous of over three millions. The expenses are considerably over five millions inside of estimates.

Twelve Hundred Lodges.

CHEYENNE, Wy., 7.—An Indian, named Hand, reports to Fort Laramie to-day, through Little Bat, the Government scout who was with Egan on his last expedition, that he met some northern Indians, who report twelve hundred lodges near the mouth of Tongue river. They moved north to meet Crook. Another band (that which has been before reported by Egan), was struck by Terry's command, the news of which drew reinforcements from the main Indian force, who, with them, engaged Terry during the whole day. One company of the Fifth Cavalry arrived in this city to-day; four more will be here to-night.

Election of Officers—Freight Reductions.

CHICAGO, 7.—The stockholders of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway, at a meeting here to-day, elected the following directors for three years: John F. Tracy, Hugh Riddle, David Dows, P. L. Cable, and Wm. M. Scott. Subsequently the directors elected officers as follows—President, John F. Tracy, Vice-President, Hugh Riddle; Secretary and Treasurer, F. H. Tows; Executive Committee, John F. Tracy, William L. Scott, Hugh Riddle, T. H. Tows and David Dows.

A private dispatch from Boston, received by the agent of the National Fast Freight Line here, announces that the managers of that line have made the following reductions from Boston to Chicago—On first, second and third class freight, which formerly were openly rated at 75, 70, and 60 cents per hundred, have all been reduced to 20 cents; and the fourth and special classes which were 45 and 35 cents have been reduced to 16 cents. This is another aggressive step on the part of the Grand Trunk.

The "Times" on the Blaine Investigation.

On the subject of the recent developments in the Blaine investigation, the Times says editorially, "The atmosphere around Blaine in Washington is so thoroughly impregnated with the magnetism of his apparently audacious defiance of public opinion, in the production of the Mulligan letters, that nothing like a calm judgment upon the effect of these letters, can be reasonably expected in that quarter. The noisy crowd of retailers about him, stimulated by a lively hunger for the good things which he alone would have the will, if he had the ability, to provide for them, fill all ears with their rejoicings at the victory he has achieved over the confederates, by his stunning change of tactics on Monday; but there are other republican circles, it seems, wherein the letters are mercilessly criticised, and the questionable nature of the ex-speaker's traffic with Fisher is fully recognized among the supporters of Conkling, Morton, Hayes and other presidential possibilities.

There is every disposition to magnify the proportions of Blaine's dubious business transactions. They will allow his fierce attack on the Confederates to have its full effect on public opinion, for in turning upon Hunton and Knott, he was fighting the battle of the party; but when the smoke of this conflict clears away, they will not be slow to point out to the country how terribly their champion has been damaged in the fray, and how poorly he is fitted to lead the party hosts in the fall campaign.

These are considerations that will have weight with the Cincinnati crowd too, for the probability of close voting in several of the States which constitute the balance of power, makes it most important that the standard bearer of republicanism shall have no record that invites attacks, as between Blaine and the Confederates in the House.

The republicans rejoice in Blaine's victory, of course, but as between Blaine and a less vulnerable candidate in the party, there will be no lack of a disposition to keenly scan all the weak points in the former's armor.

The Tribune on Blaine.

The Tribune expresses admiration at the audacity of the man, who in spite of the advice of eminent lawyers, submitted to the public, letters which he knew must show him to have been engaged in stock jobbery of all kinds, involved in the Credit Mobilier transaction, etc. It declares there are thousands of men now dazzled by the boldness and audacity of Blaine, who will rally about him and wage a strong battle in his behalf, following him to a magnificent defeat. Were the election to be held this week, Mr. Blaine's brilliant strategy and highly melodramatic action, might come pretty near winning. Its first dazzling effect might not pass away in time for the admiring spectators to recover their cooler judgments, and look behind the scene.

The dispair of the situation, however, both for Mr. Blaine and his friends, is that there are yet five long months, before the election. In politics as in diplomacy weeks and months bring about great changes. Five months is a long enough time for the popular enthusiasm to cool down and abate, and for the popular judgment to grow exacting. In that time these letters, and others that may come to light, will be discussed and criticised. They present many vulnerable points, which will be exposed by the democratic papers and stumpers; and there will be no Blaine's to reply with an overwhelming and momentary display of nerve and audacity.
