SOCIAL AND PERSONAL.

Miss Emily C. Jessup gave a very pleasant informal musical and social evening, 118 O street, on Monday evening. Among those present were Prof. and Mrs. Thomas Rudolph, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. L. Rood, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Volmer, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Peabody, Dr. and Mrs. Parmelee, Madame Rood, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. Belle Gemmell and others. Refreshments were served. Miss Jessup is making many friends among the musical people of this city.

H. P. Nielson on Monday night gave a housewarming to a number of friends at his new $5,000 home, corner of Third West and Third North streets. The evening was spent most enjoyably in the rendition of a choice musical program, refreshments and short addresses. Among those who spoke were President Anthon H. Lund and J. M. Siodahl, while vocal selections were rendered by Miss Judith Anderson and Victor Christensen, and violin solos.

Let it be neither weak nor strong, at least good, if possible fine, and brewed by one who knows how.

All right, now. Pull for Salt Lake. Everybody's going in to the deal to make a big town out of the greatest ever. Let everyone with a pull, pull. Davis is pulling with the rest. Already he's pulling in orders from all over the country as well as this city for the famous "Money-Back" shoes. The pullers will pull better in a pair.

Mrs. Corp. "pay increasingly large taxes every year, due mainly to the enormous immigration. "Who, may I ask, wants to pay taxes to educate children that should never have been brought into the world? Why should the thrifty pay for the shiftless? "I am not so uncharitable as to say that the child once here should not be cared for. But just so long as taxpayers pay for expensive playgrounds, etc., the children of the poor will increase like rabbits in a burrow. No wonder our houses of refuge and reformation are filled."

WIFE ABDUCTS CHILDREN.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 15.—F. J. Tyler, a civil engineer, yesterday reported to the police that his wife, assisted by John Boyer, her brother, abducted his two children. The mother became insane two years ago, and on recovering went to her parents' home in Ontario, where she wrote to her husband that she hated him and would not return. Two weeks ago she and her brother came from Ontario and the husband permitted them to see the children daily. During his absence on Friday they abducted the children, who were dragged from the house, struggling, and taken on board a launch, whence they were taken on board a Seattle bound steamer.

Mrs. Tyler subsequently telegraphed to her husband from a way station on the Great Northern railway that the children were well and happy with her.

FRANK PLAISTED'S GREAT DIPLOMACY.

How the Assistant General Freight Agent of the Short Line Maintained Peace.

STORY OF BIG CHICKEN COUP.

Delicate Situation Handled With Acumen—Pointer for Distressed Householders Adverse to Legal Tactics.

"Did you ever keep chickens, Plaisted?" was a question put to the assistant general freight agent of the Oregon Short line this morning during an impromptu debate upon the idiosyncrasies of poultry generally which had its origin in the story of the battle with chicken thieves told in the "News" last night.

As Frank H. Plaisted has gone in for most things that run the gamut from a Boise baseball nine to the annexing of several hundred carloads of machinery from under a rival's nose, his answer occasioned no great surprise.

"Yes, I kept chickens once," he ventured in an offhand manner. Then as an afterthought he added, "they were my neighbors."

"Now boys," he interjected with his characteristic earnestness, "I will tell you the story of the battle. Listen carefully and take a leaf out of my book and if you are bothered with the neighbor's fowls, take a tip from me."

"There was a time when I piled my-er on my garden and my thoughts ran riotously in the direction of prime berries and the succulent raspberry. At great expense and by the aid of an express frank I imported some fine plants on the heretofore immaculate grounds, and if perchance, the screen door were left open, they would inspect the house, unless headed off by a broom."

"I had the reputation of being long-suffering and peaceable. Of course, there is a law governing the trespass of chickens, but who wants to go to law with his neighbors? In my anguish I went to the lady next door and with tears in my eyes asked her to put a ball and chain on her rooster and his family. She was indignant. She led me up and down the street and told me that her chickens were well brought up and would not think of leaving their native lot to feast on prime berries belonging to a stranger. The trespassers were somebody else's chickens."

"Of course, you cannot bandy words with a lady. I went home and thought long and hard. What I said is neither here nor there; what is more to the point is what I did. I went up and down the street and set a trap at 25 cents a throw. Then I returned home with them and gave the neighbors a last chance."

"Again I called on the lady and expostulated regarding the industry of her poultry. Again she asserted indignantly that her fowls were like Caesar's wife."

"Then I breathed a sigh of relief and said I was so glad because I had bought twelve steel traps and was going to set them in the raspberry patch that night and expected to supply the neighborhood with dead pullets next day."

"As I made this statement I noticed that she changed color. At last she broke in with a rambling statement to the effect that while her chickens always stayed in the lot there might be some danger of her rooster calling on my stray fowls on my premises, and she would be pained to have that noble bird meet with an accident."

"At this I left her, and when the chickens had gone to roost for the night I adjourned to the lot, and making a lot of unnecessary noise, I proceeded to drive some stakes and set my traps."

"I gave you my word as a humble railroad man that I had no sooner settled down in the house when I heard strange sounds. On looking out of the window there stood the lady next door holding a lamp while her husband and a youngster were making an attempt to beat the band. I went to bed and they were still driving nails. Once I awoke and the hammering was yet going on. I believe they rebuilt that chicken coop that night. Anyhow no chickens strayed around my lot after that, and all I caught in my traps was a poor old toad who had been keeping late hours and was on his way home."

"Yes," he said as he turned to his stenographer to dictate an appealing letter to a shipper with a big grouch, "a little diplomacy is better than going to law and having a row with your neighbors, any day of the week."

Mother and Daughter Restored By Pe-ru-na.

Both Suffered From Catarrh of the Head and Throat. Their Recovery Was Prompt and Lasting

Peruna is kept as a family medicine in more homes than any other medicine in the world. It is safe to say that no medicine ever devised has found such wonderful popularity as a household remedy as Peruna. It is estimated that at least two million homes keep Peruna at hand continuously for family use.

MRS. P. S. GEISLER.

"I wrote to you for advice in regard to the health of my daughter. I have been giving her the Peruna regularly, as stated, and she is entirely cured of her catarrh of the throat and head. I thank you very much for your advice."

"Peruna has done me wonderful good, also, for the same ailment. I am entirely cured. I would not be without it. I will certainly praise your medicine wherever I see it is needed."

THE changeable weather during the winter months is one of the greatest foes with which every family has to contend.

Catarrh of the head and throat abound with all their disagreeable symptoms of hacking and coughing, sneezing and snuffing.

A remedy that will both relieve and prevent these ailments is of priceless value to any family.

Such a remedy is Peruna. Many a mother has discovered its merits, not only when she herself is attacked by some phase of catarrh, but for the children also.

No sooner has one member of the family been relieved—no sooner has its efficacy been discovered in one case, than it is tried in another case.

Pe-ru-na Protects the Entire Household.

We have in our files many testimonials similar to that of Mrs. Geissler. However, we do not hear from the large majority of mothers who have been benefited by Peruna.

Soon the discovery is made that Peruna is a reliable family remedy, good for mother and daughter, father and son.

No wonder so many mothers praise it. No wonder so many fathers insist on keeping it at hand.

In many a family it is an entire medicine chest, taking the place of the family doctor for the numerous climatic ailments of winter.
