INNOCENT OR GUILTY BEFORE THE LAW.

CERTAIN wiseacres have been heard to exclaim, with the fervor of a man sitting on the ragged edge of the upper board of a fence-in relation to the anti-"Mormon" raid-"Well, I don't know of any innocent man under the law who has been convicted."

It is easy for a superficial thinker to leap to a conclusion, because he reaches it without any mental analytical process, especially if his sympathies be neither hot nor cold. Neither is it a labored feat for the bitter bigot, who throws aside the searching method by which correct deductions are attained and gazes at every quesdeep-scated prejudices.

If men of mind will dig earnestly down to the roots of the anti-"Mormon" raid as a whole, they will find that they are nurtured in the very soll of trickery and injustice, hence the rank character of the upper developments.

Passing without comment the vicious character of the law under which the anti-"Mormon" assault is chiefly conducted, it is admitted that, being on the statute books, the administators and executors have no alternative but to enforce it. Its face carries upon it the inference that its applicability should be general in all Territories and other places over which the United States have jurisdiction, and upon all persons equally who infringe upon its requirements. may be cheaply husbanded and readily Notwithstanding this it is made practically a'special, and therefore an unjustly discriminative, and, in that feature as well as numerous others, unconstitutional act. From the beginning of its enforcement its application was made to "Mormons" alone, in cases brought up for trial that rendered it liable to cut non-"Mormous" positions as to its character and scope, assumed judicially, were receded from-nay abandoned altogether, and legal somersaults turned the summits of the mountains, the ve-that were, in this age, remarkable to would not be currents behold. One of these is a fair trial by a jury of his peers, of which a panel composed of men because of their being "in sympathy with the prosecution" is the satipodes. Yet such has been the color of the juries which have indicted, tried and and settlements below, in telephoni convicted "Mormons" thus far under the Edmunds act. This being contrary to common sense and good law, all who have been thus convicted are "innocent before the law," because they have been denied a legal trial. They have been refused the privilege of introducing testimony intended to show that they had conformed to the requirements of the law under which the charges were brought. If it be assumed that the proposed proof would not have been sufficient for the purpose, it should have been accepted at least as extenuating in its tendencies. But it was totaily rejected. So plain was the purpose of the proceedings that the almost unvaried sustaining of the requests of the prosecution and proportionate overruling of those of the defense were so apparent that the action of the court could be readily an-ticipated on almost every point by the spectators. Such proceedings are extra-legal and extra-judicial in their character, and men who are convicted under them are necessarily innocent before the law. It is not sufficient "under the law" to hold that a man has broken jit simply because common rumor places a case in that position. Even if there be a sentiment of moral certainty in the public mind on the subject, it is insufficient. In order to be guilty "under the law," he must be tried and convicted under the forms, usages and genius of the law. It is not necessary to go far for a striking example of this principle. There is in the Penitentiary a man who has been several times tried and convicted of a most foul and brutal murder. Each time the case has been carried on appeal to the Supreme Court the judgment of the lower Court was reversed. Once a furore was raised and it became imminent that he would be executed before his legal privileges under the law had been exhausted. The sentiment in favor of law prevailed however, and the coolest heads asserted that had the sentence been carried out it would have been a "judicial murder." As a moral certainty Hopt is guilty, yet he is innocent before the law. It is just as necessary for the protection of society that those accused of offending the laws should be legally proceeded against, and not crees were made, that for divers things

They have en-tered largely into the discussions of the domestic policies of every community in Utah from their first settlement. Now, I believe I have in my mind practicable, feasible and comparatively inexpensive solution of the water supply and reservoir problems, through and by which millions of tons of water ontrolled without the fearful risks to life and property made painfully probable through the caffon reservoir sys tem so much discussed.
