FORTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

CONGRESSIONAL

SENATE

WASHINGTON, 18. — Argument continued on Wednesday's amendment to inquire into the expediency of setting apart certain territory exclusively for negroes. The amendment was rejected, yeas 18, nays 25.

Ransom denied with much warmth the allegation of ill-treatment by the whites of the negroes in his State, and cited in support of his statement such republicans as ex-Governor Holden, United States Attorney Badger, Representative Martin and ex-Representative Smith.

After Hill's remarks Conkling asked how the negroes of Georgia got so much property.

Hill replied, by work, of course, under a democratic government.

Conkling was gratified at that, because we had heard so often here that the negroes would not work except under masters.

Hill said there was a large class of unthrifty and worthless negroes who are making all this trouble. He had doubted the capacity of the colored man, but was glad to record that he had been agreeably surprised in his speech. Half of the negroes voted the democratic ticket.

Garland said all the negroes who in Alabama had gone back except one, who had died while trying to get back.

After a spirited debate McPherson moved to go into executive session; rejected, yeas 13, nays 13.

Ingalls said he was not greatly in sympathy with the exodus. If excluded it would be disastrous to those moving, and to those among whom they settled. He had conversed with a number of negroes, and every one said his sole reason for leaving the south was a desire for political freedom and fair wages for work. One of these negroes came from Georgia, and to some extent corroborated Hill's statement about the educational advantages, but this negro said there was a convict system in Georgia, which amounted to practical slavery, under which a negro who stole a biscuit was imprisoned ten years, while a white man who killed a negro got only two years.

Congress modified his resolution and adopted Mr. Windom's amendment.

Jones opposed it as amended and stated that there was no need of treatment of the negroes in Louisiana or any other Southern State.

Davis, of Illinois, said these resolutions were likely to aid in keeping up the sectional discussion.

The vote on the adoption of the resolution resulted: yeas 27, nays 12.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 18. — Speaker, Chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported back the Senate bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to negotiate with the Ute Indians for the relinquishment of their reservation in Colorado, and their removal and settlement elsewhere, with an amendment requiring the consent of the Indians to the cession of any part of their reservation, and providing that no agreement shall be valid unless ratified by three-fourths of all the adult male Indians who have not forfeited their treaty rights and unless confirmed by Congress. He asked for an immediate consideration of the bill.

Conger rose to a point of order that it must receive its first consideration in the committee of the whole, and declined to withdraw his point, declaring that the bill was absurd on its face; that Congress could not by special action confer the treaty-making power of the nation on an officer not recognized by the Constitution or laws as having any authority to make treaties; and that Congress had nothing to do with the confirmation of treaties.

Springer said the time had arrived when civilization had reached the boundaries of the Ute reservation.
All efforts to preserve peace there would be futile in the future.

that the question of ratification is, and must be, in the interest of justice. He did not believe in treating with the Indians as with equals. He believed in the policy of regarding the whole of the lands within the limits of jurisdiction as public domain, and the Indians as citizens of the United States, and of teaching them to obey the law, and to understand that when they killed innocent persons they were guilty of murder.

Belmont said that the Ute reservation in Colorado consisted of 12,000,000 acres of land, or about 40,000 square miles. It was composed of the vast tribes of Ute and child in the Ute tribe. He was opposed to the committee amendments to the Senate bill and predicted that if they were adopted, next year would witness renewal of the conflict which had recently attracted the attention of the country. He challenged Mr.
Conger or any other of the Interior Department to point his finger to a complaint ever made by the Ute Indians against the people of Colorado. If these amendments were adopted, as certain as God was true, the government would prospect the mountains for mineral wealth, and the government would not have the power to arrest the progress of the vast tribes. If the government desired to prevent war and protect the people of Colorado, it must provide some method that would secure the removal of the Indians from that State. In coming to Washington to take his seat he had passed through five large cities, every one of which had been stolen from the Indians, and yet the gentlemen said: "While our fathers robbed and plundered the Indians, we want you to belong to the good, good class of people in the west." (Laughter.) He called the attention of Mr. Conger to the fact that the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for 1878 showed that more than 100,000 acres of land had been committed against the Indians in Michigan than in any other State or Territory. (Laughter.)

Hooker said Belmont and Springer proposed, in violation of the most sacred treaties, to rob the Indians of territory which had been conceded to them by the government.
If they were a powerful nation,
