for the purpose of business extension. number of such agents is unlimit.

R. Like a leaf from some romance of prime this reads, but it is the actual ponstitution of this extraordinary league of robbers which is now broken up. Under Jacob's astute leadership it proved most effective in binding them together and ensuring the success of their operations. Members were se-bered with the utmost core. Most of their operations. Members were se-lected with the utmost caro, Most of them were specialists. Pellesard, an ex-member of the staff of an Amerikast paper and a skilled mechanic, made the burghery tools needed by the going and burginry tools needed by the gang and they are of superb workmanship. San-tarel, besides taking his turn as a cracksman, melted down the gold sto-len by his colleagues. Ferre, a good all round thief, was the consisting of a house in Paris, and at his rooms the board of directors held their meetings. Clarence meased the role of swell and Clarenson played the role of swell and was a clever card sharper as well as an accomplished burglar.

NO NEEDLESS RISKS.

The fact that for years the existence of the band was not even suspected by the police shows with what consummate skill its operations were conduct-ed. Everything was done in the most ed. Everything was done in the most business-like fashion, and no needless fisks were taken. The thieves worked all over France, from Abbeville and Amiens to distant Markeilles. They robbed town mansions, country houses, officers' quarter., hospitals, and even churches and cathedrals. At Rennes they pillaged the house of the justice of the peace, at Mans they appropriat-ied jewels and objects of art to the value of $2,000 from the residence of the ludge of the assize court; and at Beziers. • $2,000 from the residence of the judge of the assize court; and at Dezlers. Narborne, Etheims and Roun they de-spolled the cathedrals of their sourced wessels and jeweled vestments. Against houses of worship they seemed to chert-ish a special grudge, and played the part of vandals as well as robbers, de-stracting what they could not earry off. Biroying what they could not carry off. After, loading the cathedral at Tours, they cut up the five world-famed piecea of tapestry depicting acriptural scenes and valued at $250,000.

REPT A LEDGER.

Jacob kept a ledger in which every operation or transaction of the hand and the profits accruing therefrom were intered. From the head office in Paris two traveling inspectors were sent out two traveling inspectors were sent out to lavestigate and report on houses finited by local agents as offering good opportunities for a safe job. They were paid a solary of $100 a month mach, all their expenses and a share of the profits obtained from the busi-bress done as a result of their efforts. If any of the 40 members of the trust were unfortunate enough to be caught were unfortunate enough to be caught the committee of five undertook to sup-port his family while he served his

It was chance and not detective skill It was chance and not detective skill that ultimately led to the discovery of the gang and the arrest of its prin-cipal members. If the landlord of a cafe at Abbeville had not been troubled with a toothache one night it is pos-sible that Ali Baba Jacob would still be bossing his 40 thieves. The tooth-ache kept the cafe proprietor awake when he ought to have been asleep, and glancing out of a window he saw lights in a villa opposite, the occupants lights in a villa opposite, the occupants of which he knew were absent. Sus-pecting something wrong he slipped out of the house and aroused the police. By the time the minions of the law arrived, Jacob and several of his assist-ants who were engaged in the burglary had taken alarm and fled along the

The police succeeded in arresting 29 of its ed fire with revolvers, killing one po-liceman and severally wounding an-other. An exciting man hunt followed, but eventually two of the gang were arrested in a marsh near Amiens. Jacob was one of them and some cor-respondence found in his pocket caus-ed a watch to be kept on a house in Paris. Here the third man who had been implicated in the murder Paris members and ultimately in unravelling the most astounding story of organized criminal operations that has ever been told in a French law court. The other cause of discontent is connected with the presents which many city councils in various parts of Ger-many have thought fit to prepare for many have thought fit to prepare for the crown prince. Unmistakable hints were given by the minister of the in-terior to the elected municipal repre-sentative assemblies throughout Prue-sia that tokens of loyalty in condection with the crown princes wedding would not ovly be welcomed but would be ex-pected in Berlin as a matter of course, so that all those municipal councils which were susceptible to official in-fluence immediately proceeded to vote sums of money for wedding presents. Vandsbek a bold citizen brought a legal action against the town council, which he accused of misappropriating the sum devoted to the purpose of a wedding present for the crown prince. This citizen demands that the law courts shall declare the vote of the town coun-cil to be null and vold, and shall sen-tence the members of the town council to contribute the money out of their own pockets. The outcome of the trial is awaited with keen interest. At Sandau an der Elbe a public meet-ing was held to protest against the wed-ding present being given to the crown prince, and one of the speakers stated that the local authorities had reduced their annual grant of $12 to the poor and destitute of the district to $5 in or-der that the difference of $7 might go towards the crown prince's wedding present. It was stated that this re-duction of the charitable grant had been made as the result of a strong hint given by higher authorities, and considerable indignation was expressed. considerable indignation was expressed. Morris, miner, of 4i south Sixth West, says: "I followed rail-roading for months, and if the constant jarring of the train, the stoopfur, twist-ing and turning involved in such an occupation was not the primary cause of kidney trouble, it certainly ag-gravated it when the attacks occurred. Later I had considerable annoyance from the dull, disgreeable aching in my back, often so persistent and narging that I was unable to complete a day's work. I have beer so unconfortable in any position that to rest was out of the question, and very often my rest was disturbed. I knew from the ac-tion and condition of the kidney se-cretions that those organs required at-tention, but when a man exhausts all his knowledge of medicine and stand-disturbances, and all his efforts are futile, he naturally becomes discourfutile, he naturally becomes discour-aged or is constantly on the outlook aged or is constantly on the outlook for some means to help.
