CHINESE JILTS JAPANESE WIDOW.

Mrs. Ruth Kim, a young, petite, rosy cheeked Japanese widow, has brought suit against Jim Fook, proprietor of a Chinese restaurant, for breach of promise. Her lawyer places the best damage at $20,000. Papers have been served on Fook, but the trial date is not yet set.

"Fook asked my brother-in-law, Walter Wong, an interpreter, to introduce him. He took me to the theater frequently. We were to be married 'Thanksgiving day.'"

"On Nov. 12, when I returned from a visit to relatives in Boston, he insisted that I act as cashier and waitress of his restaurant and that I move my furniture to rooms over his place. Then Jim grew cold and kept putting off the wedding day. The reason for his change was a mystery until Dec. 1, I found him smoking cigarettes with an old sweetheart, an American girl. Then he told me he wouldn't marry me and to pack my things and go. He has broken my heart."

Jim Fook, at his restaurant, near Twenty-second street said:

"I'm in a predicament to marry her. Me only live her waitress for 57 weeks. She only want make trouble."
