TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS and DISORDERED LIVER.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, a feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work, and are a perfect

THE LIVER AND ITS FUNCTIONS.

It has become a well established fact that the larger portion of diseases which the human family is subject arise in the first place from some derangement of the Liver. This organ is not only the largest, but at the same time one of the most important. The venous blood, on its return to the heart, passes through this organ, and in its passage deposits impurities, and the elements which are necessary for digestion as well as for a proper action of the bowels. In fact, all the material are eliminated. From this it is self-evident that the Liver is liable to derange to a greater or less extent, and when this occurs it is impossible for it to properly fulfil its office of removing all objectionable matter from the blood, but allows it to pass through, carrying with it the poisons of which it should have been relieved.

With impure blood the health of the entire system becomes affected, and a great variety of diseases are the result. To properly perform its functions unless it is supplied with pure blood to maintain its strength. So the Liver becomes all important, and when out of health the feeling of being continually tired, worn out, is constant, with tendency to Piles, Headache, Sick Stomach, Salloy Complexion, Eruptions of the Skin, etc. they may be sure their derangement is required to be relieved in order to prevent the accumulations, and restore it to its original Strength and Vigor. For all diseases of this kind we feel safe in recommending

DR. S. F. SHERMAN'S PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

The result of years of study, experience and practice of Dr. S. F. SHERMAN, its originator, and its success wherever introduced, is unparalleled by any medicine ever before the public. Prickly Ash Bitters is not one of the many "Quack Nostrums" that flood the country, but is a scientific combination of the best vegetable remedies known to the profession, and is offered to the public with the full confidence that it will do all that is claimed for it. In a mild yet effective manner, it acts on the Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Bowels, restoring them to a healthy condition, and thereby curing all diseases arising from their derangement. Prickly Ash Bitters is a sure cure for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Fever and Ague, Kidney Complaints, Female Weakness, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Blood Diseases, Boils, Humors, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Sores, Ulcers, Mercurial Diseases, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Bowels, in a mild yet effectual manner, and is at the same time the best tonic known to the medical profession, and is acknowledged to be the most wonderful blood purifier ever discovered. Prickly Ash Bitters is a sure cure for all diseases of a private nature, arising from a disordered condition of the system, and is recommended and prescribed by the most eminent physicians for all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stomach and Bowels.

PRICKLY ASH BITTERS is a positive cure for every male and female complaint arising from a disordered condition of the system, and being entirely vegetable, it is perfectly safe in the hands of the most inexperienced. It is not claimed as a cure-all, but for derangements of the great organs mentioned, it is a specific and as a BLOOD PURIFIER rivals all other compounds. Ask your druggist for it, and give it a fair trial. If he has none on hand, tell him it will be ordered for you.

EVENING NEWS.

The World's Oil Supply.

THE PRINCIPAL SOURCE OF ANIMAL AND VEGETABLE OILS.

For a moment let us glance at the principal sources of animal and vegetable oil supply, ere the fountains of mineral oil were revealed for the use and comfort of the human family.

First and foremost, of course, ranked the fish oils—the well-known train (or drain) oil which it drained from the blubber of the great Greenland whale—a large whale sometimes yielding fully 30 tons of blubber—each ton representing nearly 200 gallons of oil. Though the cachalot, or sperm-whale, could never rival the Greenland whale in the quantity of its contribution, it had at least the advantage of quality and variety, since besides ordinary blubber it yields a large amount of sperm oil, and also of spermaceti. Of the latter valuable product, the head alone often yields ten barrels.

Next among oil-yielding fish come the grampus or dolphin, the porpoise, the shark, the seal, the cod, the herring and others.

Of animal fats are butter, tallow, lard goose-grease, neat's-foot oil (prepared from the feet of oxen and used by curriers in dressing leather), and mare's grease (imported from Buenos Ayres ane Monte video, where a multitude of horses are annually slaughtered for the sake of their hides, tallow and bones!) In Russia, especially at Moscow, yolk-of-egg oil is in great repute for making soap and pomatum.

Vegetables oils form a very important item in our supplies, inasmuch as oil-seeds to the value of 5,500,000 pounds sterling are annually imported into Britain for crushing purposes, and our exports of oil are roughly valued at 1,600,000 pounds sterling. The export of seed-oil from London, Hull and Liverpool, in 1880, was 14,508,000 gallons.

Under the head of seed-oils rank linseed, cotton-seed and castor-oil. Colzo oil, also, is made from mustard, hemp, radish, rape, turnip, and other seeds. Then we have olive oil and almond oil. From India comes poppy-seed oil; from the Black Sea, oil of sunflower seeds. From Ceylon and the Pacific Isles comes cocoa-nut oil. From western Africa the palm-nut oil of the oil palm, and oil of ground nuts, for use in fine machinery. From Singapore and China we receive kokum oil and vegetable tallow. About 14,000 tons of croton oil are annually imported for the use of the wool-dressers of Britain.

Besides these, so familiar to ourselves, almost every country has some specialty in oils. Thus, in Southern Russia, tobacco oil is largely used; in Italy, oil of grape stones; in China, oil of tea seed; in India, oil of nutmegs, of seed of the gamboga tree, of the custard apple seed of cashewnut, of cardamom, of meam, of margoza, and many others. Brazil, too, has a large number of oils, both animal and vegetable, peculiar to itself.—Popular Science Monthly.

Saving and Spending.

Saving and spending are two actually existing and distinct arts which men who can do neither well are in the habit of resolving in the first month of each year to practice for the rest of their lives.

The one does not naturally follow on the other, as so many people suppose, but they are separate and seldom combined. Every one knows the man who scrapes and saves all the time until he has acquired a fortune. When he achieves this result one rarely sees such a man practice the art of spending judiciously. If he could do so it would lengthen his life, instead of prematurely ageing him and sending him to his grave with furrowed forehead and wan face wearied by the constant anxiety which goes with the practice of rigid economy and close watching of the pennies.

On the other hand is the familiar sight of a man who has suddenly acquired a fortune without working for it. He makes ducks and drakes of his dollars, which leave him with the proverbial swiftness of winged Fortune, and he is worse off than he was before his riches had given him tastes he knew not of.

Most people belong to either one of two classes of which extreme types have been taken as illustrations. As an English writer once said, seldom does the capacity for spending money increase steadily with the means of doing so. Either it outstrips it or lags behind, leaving a hiatus which is deplorable, in the one case to the man himself and in the other to most of those who surround him.

The Horatian rule for all people, whether money-getters or money-spenders, is the best, "keep the golden medium." Every energy is properly enough directed to saving enough money for needful support, including the rainy day nest egg. At the same time contentment and the happy medium will be preserved if a certain part of savings be set apart for spending with the same carefulness that was used in accumulation. The neglect of either of these arts will lead to unhappy or discontented lives; their observance is a sign of the wise man.—Philadelphia News.

Washington's Personal Appearance

Washington's boots were enormous. They were No. 13. His ordinary walking shoes were No. 11. His hands were large in proportion, and he could not find a glove to fit him, and had to have his gloves made to order. His mouth was his strong feature, the lips being always tightly compressed.

He weighed two hundred pounds, and there was no surplus flesh about him. He was tremendously muscled, and the fame of his great strength was everywhere. His huge tent when wrapped up with the poles was so heavy that it required two men to place it in the camp wagon. Washington could lift it with one hand and throw it in the wagon as easily as if it were a pair of saddlebags. He could hold a musket with one hand and shoot with precision as easily as other men did with a horse-pistol. His lungs were his weak point, and his voice was never strong. He was at this time in the prime of life. His hair was a chestnut brown, his cheeks were prominent, and his head was not large, in contrast to every other part of his body, which seemed large and bony at all points. His finger joints and wrists were so large as to be genuine curiosities. As to his habits at that period I found out much that might be interesting. He was an enormous eater, but was content with bread and meat, if he had plenty of it. But hunger seemed to put him in a rage. It was his custom to take a drink of rum or whisky on awaking in the morning.

Of course all this was changed when he grew old. I saw him at Alexandria a year before he died. His hair was very gray and his form was slightly bent. His chest was very thin. He had false teeth which did not fit, and pushed his under lip outward. I believe he drank much more in his old age. He had whisky in the morning, and at dinner two bottles of Madeira wine. He was a great lover of fine wines and horses.—Chicago Tribune.

HUNTING COYOTES.—During the winter cowboys and hunters find "wolfing" a profitable business. Bounties of $1.50 are paid in Wyoming upon each wolfe or coyote killed. The pelts are brought to the office of the county clerks, the paws are cut off, the ears punctured and the pelt is returned to the hunter, who, in addition to the bounty, realizes all the way from 50 cents to $5 for its hide, its size, variety and general condition controlling its value in the market.

Nearly every day some cowboy, ranchman or hunter brings a bundle of pelts to the office of the county clerk in this city and obtains the bounty, while the skins find a ready sale in the markets. The skins are tanned with the hair on and are manufactured into robes, rugs and overcoats, and not a few are stuffed.

During the past six months nearly 1,000 have been paid as bounty on wolves killed in Laramie county alone, and this does not include the large number of wolves killed during the winter, and which will not be brought in until spring. In other portions of the territory a still greater number of wolves are annually killed. At a rough estimate 12,000 wolves and coyotes are killed every year in Wyoming. The number of calves those wolves would destroy would furnish, if it could be learned, interesting data for the settlements.—Cheyenne Leader.

There is in New Granada a curious vegetable product known under the name of the ink-plant. Its juice can be used in writing without any previous preparation. The letters traced with it are of a reddish color first but turn a deep black in a few hours.

Nail-Kegs as Beehives.

A Vermont correspondent writes: Beekeeping does not call for an elaborate system. Expensive hives are not wanted; the bee is satisfied with any kind of a receptacle, box or nail-keg, and the farmer can make them himself. The mention of "nail-keg" revives a story that is vouched for. A beekeeper placed a nail-keg on high land in an isolated part of the country. Every year for six years he "caught" a swarm of bees in the keg, and one year two swarms. The natural hive, or the hive of the wild bee, is a hollow tree. The forests have been cut away and hollow trees are no longer abundant. The bees caught in the nail-keg were looking for a hollow tree, and not finding it were obliged to occupy what appeared to be equivalent. According to the law laid down by apiarians, the bee scouts sent out to view the country had to find an abiding-place, found the nail-keg long before emigration, and when the time came to separate from the parent colony led the new family direct to the new home. Not only many farmers keep bees, but others also, in fact any person in the city or country. The pasturage may be better in one place than in another, but as the bee travels three to five miles, some say ten or twelve miles, if will find honey at a distance if it be not near. Bees in large cities have been very successful. The man or woman who has no land except that on which the house stands may keep bees and profit by them. Hives may be placed on roofs, or porches in upper rooms or attics, and in fact, in any room in the house, under certain conditions. An "observatory hive," a hive with a glass side, may be placed in the living-room, and the process of making comb, storing honey, raising and feeding the brood and the whole economy of the wonderful worker studied by the members of the family, furnishing amusement and instruction as entertaining as it is novel and varied. This hive is placed near a window, which may be raised or pierced with holes in the lower sash. Fine wire netting shuts in the front of the hive and prevents the bees from flying in the room.—New England Farmer.

If ten parts of collodion are added to fifteen parts of creosote a sort of jelly is obtained which is more convenient to apply to decayed teeth than creosote in the liquid form.

Among the ancient Assyrians all marriageable young girls were assembled in one place, and the public crier put them up to sale one after another. The money which was received for those who were handsome, and consequently sold well, was bestowed as a wedding portion on those who were plain. When the most beautiful had been disposed of, the more ordinary looking were offered for a certain sum, and allotted to those who were willing to take them. Hence all the women were provided with husbands. The Babylonians, like the Assyrians, held a kind of market for their daughters at certain times every year. They were assembled in a public place, where they were exposed to general view, and disposed of to the best bidders by the public crier. The money given for the purchase of the handsome ones was applied to portion out those who were deficient in personal attractions. This custom is said to have originated with Atossa, the daughter of Belochus.
